Kidnaped G-Girl Kills Would-Be Rapist

Arlington Woman Slays Abductor on Wild Ride

After a terror-stricken kidnap ride of 10 night hours under threat of rape and death, a 19-year-old Arlington Navy girl shot her abductor to death early yesterday.

The hysterical kidnap ride was punctuated with demands that the girl submit, waving of two guns and a package of dynamite fused to explode in seconds.

The shooting took place 3½ miles west of Berryville, Va., authorities reported. The ride began in Arlington, 10 hours earlier.

The girl walked barefoot, in torn clothing, a half mile over freezing gravel roads to surrender to authorities. She identified herself as Miss Theresa Koenig and said she was born in Middletown, Va., and had lived in Arlington a year.

A man, also forced through most of the kidnap ride at gunpoint, to act as driver, escaped the abductor, and was reporting the case to Virginia State police. As they prepared to put out a lookout order, the girl called with news she had killed the man.

When Miss Koenig came to Arlington, she said, she lived with her brother, Martin Koenig, 924 N. Lebanon st., but has recently roomed at 856 N. Kensington ave.

The man killed was Charles Ellyett, 22, who recently lived in Arlington while employed by a painting contractor, and who came from the same part of Virginia as Miss Koenig.

The other man on the crazy ride was William Bryant, who recently has lived with Ellyett's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ellyett of Boyce, Va.

When officers got to Ellyett's car—to find him dead with a bullet wound near his heart—they discovered another pistol in addition to the one Miss Koenig had seized from his hip holster. In the rear seat they found two sticks of dynamite bound together with a detonating cap and a 3-inch fuse. Officers said the charge would have exploded seconds after the fuse was lit.

Yesterday's 46 Lowest Maximum Since March 20

It'll be both colder and warmer today than it was yesterday, the weatherman reports.

Early this morning the temperature is expected to dip to 34 in the city, 28 in the suburbs, two degrees lower than yesterday's coldest.

In the afternoon, the forecaster says it will mellow to about 53 degrees. Yesterday's warmest was a chill 46 at 3:20 p. m.

Yesterday's maximum temperature of 46 degrees was the lowest maximum recorded here since March 20.

William Latimore, 27, of 710 A st. ne., was seriously burned at 11:15 a. m. while huddling around a can of burning gasoline to keep warm at a construction site at 1625 I st. nw. The can was accidentally tipped over and the blazing fluid spilled onto Latimore. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital with third-degree burns to hands and legs.

A flood of warm air broke into the Western plains yesterday which is expected to reach Washington and the southeastern States by Sunday.

School Loans Invalidated In Maryland

The Maryland Court of Appeals yesterday took away 50 million dollars in school bond money and snarled school construction plans in the State.

The court reversed a ruling given by the Baltimore Circuit Court in a "friendly suit" over a technical defect in the 50-million-dollar school bond law passed by the 1949 Legislature.

The higher court held that the law failed to pass because a journal clerk failed to list it in the Senate journal as having passed. The bill provided a 50-million-dollar State credit fund from which counties would borrow at low interest rates.

Immediate effect of the decision was to block issuance of $7,890,000 in bonds already authorized by the State Board of Public Works for school building.

Montgomery County had already asked for $1,330,125 as a leg up on a $5,040,000 building program during 1949-50.

Prince Georges County expected to ask for about $6,200,000 to finance the major portion of an eight-million-dollar construction program.

Both counties, as well as the rest of the State, will have to await some new action for these funds. Two courses seemed to be open:

Gov. W. Preston Lane may call a special session of the Legislature to correct the defect, or he may wait until next February, and ask the Legislature to reenact the law when it meets in regular session.

Louis J. O'Donnell, assistant to the Governor, said it had not been decided whether a special session would be necessary.

Fiscal, legal and school officials will confer to see whether a method can be worked out to tide the schools over until the regular session, O'Donnell said.

Falls Church Votes Today on School Bond

The fate of an "urgently needed" $700,000 school construction program in Falls Church will be decided at the polls today by the city's resident property owners.

The 2500 "freeholders" will decide by a majority vote whether or not the School Board may borrow that sum to build a junior-senior high school and a 120-pupil primary school. Part of the funds will also be used to remodel the present Madison-Jefferson School.

All persons on a list of eligible city "freeholders," posted at City Hall, the Madison Schoo., and the Falls Church police station, may vote in the election. They need not have paid a poll tax.

The freeholders list includes all resident city property owners 21 years of age and over. The list was compiled originally from the city's property tax records. Any persons omitted from the first draft were given a chance to be added, by presentation of their property deeds, before the list was closed November 9.

Polling places, open today from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m., will be: Ward 1, City Hall; Ward 2, Madison School; Ward 3, Broad Street Motors, 1001 W. Broad st.

School officials maintain the $700,000 loan will require a rise in the tax rate of no more than 25 cents. This would boost the present total rate from $4.55 to $4.80

The Falls Church loan has been indorsed by Fairfax school officials, who hope to receive authorization for their own school bond issue

'Truth Serum' Test Succeeds, Amnesia Girl Tells Her Name

An attractive girl who has been in Gallinger Hospital as an amnesia victim since November 2 has identified herself under influence of a "truth serum," hospital authorities disclosed yesterday.

She said she is Carol May Harrison, 21, of New York City, and gave her married name as Harris.

As Dr. Joseph F. Fazekas, chief of staff of the hospital, and Dr. Lillian Malone, senior in the psychiatric section, were conducting the "truth serum" quiz Thursday, police received a telegram from a man who believes he is her father.

He identified himself as Ransford Harrison, of 308 W. 94th st., New York, and said he would arrive here yesterday to confirm the tentative identification of the girl which he made from news pictures. However, hospital authorities said last night he had not yet arrived.

The Washington police missing persons bureau forwarded a Washington Post picture of the girl to New York police, among other places. They were advised yesterday that Harrison made his tentative identification from that picture in the New York police missing persons bureau file. Police here credited The Washington Post with an assist in the identification.

Dr. Fazekas said that the girl readily consented to the use of the so-called "truth serum" as a possible aid in obtaining her identity.

He said the drug, sodium pentothal, was fed very slowly into a vein, inducing a "twilight state midway between wakefulness and complete sleep." In that state, she was questioned by Dr. Malone and gave her name as Harrison.

Bliss Backs Service Kin's Medical Aid

By Elton C. Fay
Associated Press Reporter

The Army's chief doctor spoke out strongly yesterday against a Budget Bureau proposal to stop giving free doctor care to families of military personnel.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Army Surgeon General, said that "if I were to deliberately plan to destroy the effectiveness of the armed forces, I should select as the most effective measure the denial of dependent medical care to men in the services."

Budget Director Frank Pace raised the issue this week in a letter to Secretary of Defense Johnson.

Pace pointed out that Congress recently raised military pay scales by 300 million dollars a year, and suggested that the armed forces consider dropping the old custom by which the wives and children of service personnel get free medical care and inexpensive hospital service.

Asked for his views on the proposal, Bliss said in a statement to reporters that medical attention has been given to the families of soldiers since 1776 and that "our doctors have considered it more than a privilege to be able to help their comrades who needed help."

He said the "question of charging money for this helpfulness has never even been considered."

The Hoover Commission on Government reorganization has estimated that about 900,000 dependents of the Army and Air Force alone are eligible for free medical care or cut-rate hospitalization. Not all of these persons would be affected by Pace's proposal. He suggested applying it mainly to personnel in the less remote areas of this country.

Bliss said that about 85 percent of the dependent medical care is given to the families of enlisted men, as differentiated from officers' families.

"We have found that in our hospitals some 40 to 50 percent of these soldiers are unable financially

U. N. Ban Put On Albanian, Bulgar Arms

Lake Success, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—The United Nations General Assembly burying Soviet-bloc opposition, today clapped an arms embargo on Albania and Bulgaria until they halt aid to Greek guerillas.

In addition, for the third year in a row, the Assembly gave the on-the-spot U. N. committee the task of settling the lingering dispute between Greece and its Communist neighbors over their aid to now-dwindling guerilla forces.

The vote on the package resolution was 50-6, with two abtentions. Yugoslavia voted "no" with its former Cominform partners.

The unprecedented embargo was considered more of a moral judgment than a practical form of pressure against the two Soviet satellites. The other Cominform states, their chief arms suppliers, were certain to ignore the embargo appeal.

The embargo is in the form of a recommendation that all countries refrain from direct or indirect provision of any arms or other materials to Albania and Bulgaria.

Immediately after approving the embargo, the Assembly overwhelmingly defeated a Soviet proposal calling for: general amnesty and new supervised elections in Greece; withdrawal of foreign — meaning Anglo-American — military assistance from Greece by a deadline to be fixed; supervision of elections by a commission on which Russia would have a place; and abolition of the U. N.'s watchdog committee.

The approved majority resolution said continuation of Cominform aid to the reeling guerillas "would seriously increase the gravity of the danger to the peace" and would justify calling a special Assembly session.

Heated Debate in Union

Ship Officers Delay Strike On East, Gulf Coasts 30 Days

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

AFL ship officers yesterday put over for 30 days their threatened strike, a walkout which would have tied up the bulk of shipping on the East Coast and Gulf ports.

Leaders of the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots Union met at the Hotel Hamilton here, and after heated debate agreed to move up the strike deadline to December 16.

Federal Conciliator William N. Margolis had urged the officers to okay the truce at a mediation session yesterday morning. Later, Mediator Margolis declared he was "deeply gratified at the cooperative attitude" of the union since it "offers opportunity for the fullest mediation efforts."

Had the union leaders turned down the truce request, some 200 ships' officers and pilots would have struck Tuesday night against 38 Atlantic and Gulf ship owners.

Stumbling block to completion of contract negotiations between the union and the ship operators is the question of hiring procedure.

The union wants a hiring hall system, similar to that won by the deck officers on the West Coast early this month. The union would have the ship's officers hired under a rotary system so that all the officers would share available berths. The shipping companies are opposed to such an employment procedure, asserting it would restrict management's right to select its deck officers.

Would Expunge Reprimand

Court-Martial or Clear Me, Capt. Crommelin Demands

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin demanded yesterday that the reprimand administered to him by Admiral Forrest P. Sherman be withdrawn or that he be court-martialed.

His demand, contained in a lengthy letter to Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, received no immediate response. Sherman told reporters he had received the letter shortly after noon but had not read it and was unwilling to comment until he had done so. He indicated he might have some comment today.

Crommelin, who precipitated a congressional inquiry last month by making public "confidential" naval correspondence, called reporters to his home yesterday and gave them copies of his letter to Sherman. In it he said that his release of the correspondence was dictated by his oath as a naval officer.

"In releasing the letter," he wrote, "I was guided by that portion of my oath which requires me to support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic. The obligations assumed under this oath left me no honorable alternative course of action."

He said release of his letter to Sherman was justified by the fact that Sherman's reprimand was also made public "regardless of the broad policies to the contrary."

It was thought highly unlikely that Crommelin would get the court-martial he demanded. Navy spokesmen cited Article 1413 of Naval Regulations, 1948, to show that "no person in the naval serv-

43 Dead or Missing In Crash Series; Up to 400 Superforts Affected by Order

By the United Press

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Chief of Staff, yesterday grounded all B-29 Superfortresses which have not undergone engine modernization or which have been "subjected to maximum operating stresses."

Vandenberg's directive ordered the B-29s grounded pending "complete inspection" by Air Force technical experts. It followed loss of four of the big craft in three days in which 43 persons are dead or missing.

The order was issued following a conference between Vandenberg and Lieut. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, strategic air commander.

It applies to all of the Strategic Air Command's B-29s and also to the Far Eastern Nineteenth Bomb Group based at Guam.

The Air Force said other Superfortresses affected by the order include all that have been subjected to extreme operational stresses such as maximum altitude flights or takeoffs with maximum gross weight.

It would not estimate how many planes would be affected. The number in operation was placed at 400, including 10 groups of 30 planes each and spares.

Manufacture of B-29s was stopped shortly after the war ended.

Officials would not comment on what the engine modernization consisted of, but informed sources said it included some new parts. They said that engine trouble apparently was a factor in the crash of only one of the four B-29s lost in the past three days. That was the one which crashed shortly after take-

Shah Works, He Says; Has Busy Day Here

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The young Shah of Iran described himself as a "working monarch" yesterday in a luncheon speech to an audience of working newspapermen and women.

"I work, too," he said. As if to prove his point, he visited President Truman at the White House, had his first serious policy discussions with Secretary Acheson at Prospect House, and as the commander of Irans' armed forces went to the Pentagon to tell his country's military needs to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The Shah's crowded day also included wreath-laying visits to Mount Vernon and Arlington.

At the press luncheon, given by the Overseas Writers at the Carlton Hotel, the Shah answered questions with the self-confidence and skill of an old hand. These were some of his answers:

On relations with Russia: "I hope the recent lessening of tension will continue, because we and Russia are neighbors. All countries that are willing to respect our independence will have the opportunity, if they wish it, to have normal and friendly relations with us."

On a possible extension of the Arab League: "We are not an Arab nation. An extension of the Arab League would not mean a thing to us. But we are

Navy Reduces Active Planes By 20 Percent

The Navy yesterday announced a 20 percent cut in its active aircraft just as Defense Secretary Johnson was declaring his intention to save two billion dollars in the 1951 budget.

The Navy's move, which also included closing down six air stations, was in line with Johnson's insistence that all services economize in current spending. The Navy's share of the 865-million-dollar saving recently ordered was 353 million, though Navy Secretary Matthews testified at a House Armed Services Committee hearing October 8 that to carry it out would endanger the national security.

Some observers here saw the present heavy cuts being taken by the Navy as a result of "inflation" of its aviation in 1947. At that time, they point out, the Navy received large appropriations with which they built many airfields and procured many aircraft which present budget restrictions do not permit them to keep in commission.

Johnson's economy announcement yesterday, made in a speech at Boston, included the assertion that in the future the armed forces would do their own budget cutting instead of leaving it up to Congress. He told the twenty-fifth annual New England conference of the New England Council:

"In the past there often crept into military and naval budgets exaggerated demands for specific appropriations because, it being a foregone conclusion that Congress would cut the amount, there was a feeling such a practice of asking for more was justified to assure at least the minimum required for adequate defense. We hope to correct that situation."

Johnson added that the next Defense Department budget would be a "scientific budget . . . which will be more indicative of rock-bottom needs." No "arbitrary" cuts would be made, he said, but neither would any project be considered too "sacred" for close inspection.

The Navy's reduction of its air strength will be effected by discontinuing 28 Navy and seven Marine

Russians Expel Top Tito Official For Espionage

London, Saturday, Nov. 19 (AP).—Yugoslavia's highest ranking diplomat in Moscow, Charge d'Affaires Lazo Latinovic, has been expelled from Russia for spying, Tass said early today, and three Russian representatives have been ousted from Yugoslavia.

The Moscow dispatch said a Russian consul, military attache and information bureau representative "recently" were ordered out of Yugoslavia for "anti-Yugoslav activities."

Yugoslav Ambassador Karl Mrazovic left Moscow in August. Last month Russia demanded his official recall on charges of "spying and subversive activities."

Public 'Reception' by Jostling, Laughing Crowd of 7000 Surprises Barkleys at Their Wedding in St. Louis Church

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 18.—"I certainly was surprised by the reception," said Vice President Barkley, coining the season's understatement. Bride Keeps Tradition As to Adornment

St. Louis, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Mrs. Alben W. Barkley disclosed after her wedding to the Vice President today that she wore "something blue, something borrowed, something old and something new" in the tradition of all brides.

She said the "new" was a diamond ring which Barkley gave her in lieu of an engagement ring and which she wore on the middle finger of her right hand.

The "borrowed" was a handkerchief, from whom she didn't say.

The blue was her wedding suit.

The old? She said, "You can quote Mrs. Barkley as saying she refused to say what was old."

Bethesda's Captive Cold Bug Disappears, Blow to Science

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Medical science's famous "cold" virus has escaped, gone into hiding, or just plain vanished.

The scientific loss was confirmed yesterday by Dr. Leon T. Atlas, United States Public Health Service scientist who helped isolate the virus which produces symptoms of the common cold, and who had nursed it along ever since at the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda.

The troublesome virus, MR-1, disappeared about two months ago from the batches of fertile hen's eggs in which it was being incubated, he said.

Just what happened may never be known, Dr. Atlas reported, but there may have been a temporary mechanical failure in the incubators or refrigerators.

Since then, hundreds of tests have been performed without yielding a trace of the virus, or a clew to the cause of its disappearance. They are still looking but the research men have just about given up hope of ever recovering it, he admitted.

Although a new "cold" virus can be gotten almost at the drop of a handkerchief, the laboratory loss is a serious setback to the search for the cause, treatment and prevention of the common cold.

Since its first isolation, in 1947,

Douglas Sees Cuts In Spending Possible

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) said yesterday it would be a crime" for Congress to increase taxes until every effort has been made to cut Federal spending.

Douglas, chairman of the Joint Senate-House Subcommittee on Monetary, Credit and Fiscal Policies, is a liberal Democrat who voted in the last session with Republicans and conservative Democrats for budget cuts.

The Illinois Senator told reporters there were many Federal appropriations which could be cut if people back home would realize that special interests had to yield to the national good.

W. Randolph Burgess, chairman of the executive committee of the National City Bank of New York, testified before the economic subcommittee yesterday that the "foremost inflationary element" in the Nation's economy is an unbalanced Federal budget.

Burgess maintained that the Federal Reserve system should be free to let bond prices fluctuate as a means of regulating the supply of money and credit.

Senator Douglas said that among the special interests who should bow to the public good, are publishers of newspapers and magazines, who he said are subsidized out of public funds to the tune of 400 million dollars a year in the form of special mailing privileges.

He saw no reason, he said, why taxpayers should subsidize Henry Luce and the Curtis Publishing Co., for example. Luce publishes Time, Life and Fortune magazines. Curtis publishes the Saturday Evening Post and other large magazines.

Douglas also pointed to rivers and harbors appropriations as places where large cuts could be made. The number of Federal employes, he said, could be cut by 2 to 10 percent.

Douglas' statement was made a day after President Truman indicated to his news conference he may seek a tax increase next year to bring the Government out of the red. The President said he will submit in January a watertight budget which will be hard to cut.

Congressional reaction already shows that President Truman will have an almost impossible job to get a tax increase next year.

Senator Eugene Millikin (R., Colo.), chief Senate Republican spokesman on taxes, said he did not believe there would be any tax increase. Instead, he suggested, there may be some cuts in excise levies.

Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), said a thorough study should be made of the possibility of curtailing the expense of Government before any attempt is made to raise taxes.

Bid by Lewis To Operators Goes Unheeded

The contract dispute between John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and the coal mine operators yesterday rested on dead center.

Union headquarters said that John L.'s invitation of last week—that he was ready and willing to resume direct negotiations with any and all operations—was still valid.

Industry spokesmen, who have been insisting they don't want to talk to John L. any more unless he gets down to cases and disclosed what he specifically wants in the way of a new contract, said that their attitude is unchanged.

There's been no rush of operators to UMW's "open house," commented John Battle, executive vice president of the National Coal Association.

Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, yesterday took issue with President Truman's declaration of belief that there was no national emergency in the coal situation, and that he did not intend to invoke the anti-strike provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act until a time of emergency occurred.

The President's firm attitude indicates he will not intervene to prevent a second strike by the soft-coal miners, who returned to work last week after a 52-day walkout, threatened for Dec. 1.

Transit Union and Company Stage 2 Clashes at Hearing

Capital Transit Co. officials yesterday contested arguments of union employes for changes in sick leave, vacations and working conditions.

Yesterday's hearing, before the five-man board arbitrating the dispute over a new union contract, was marked by two clashes between attorneys, and agreement on four minor points.

One clash came after S. E. Emmons, general manager, had said Capital transit now employs 81 part-time men, many of them GI students. The union has asked elimination of the part-time work.

"Unsavory Practice" Disputed

He said he would rather hire them than pay overtime to regular or "extra" employes. E. L. Oliver, union attorney, called the part-time hiring an "unsavory practice," and said the company had stated in 1947 it would be discontinued.

After Emmons had denied this, Hawley S. Simpson, company attorney, remarked that now Oliver was being "unsavory." A heated exchange between Simpson and Oliver was stopped by the board chairman, Alfred A. Colby, who called a cooling-off recess.

Another argument came when J. Godfrey Butler, director of personnel, testified that employes who were out sick for three days or less were not required to produce doctors' certificates.

The statement contradicted testimony by the union, which wants the company to agree not to require the certificates for short absences. The union has asked an increase in compensated sick leave from the present 7 days a year to 12, cumulative to 60 days against the present 35.

After another exchange and five-minute recess, Butler said he had no control over requests for doctors' certificates by superintendents of divisions.

Earlier, Simpson argued that present 20-minute paid lunch periods cost the company $308,000 a year.

Security Indivisible, U. N. Aide Declares

National security without world security is impossible, the Montgomery County League of Women Voters were told yesterday by an American representative to the United Nations at a luncheon at the Bethesda, Md., Women's Club.

Speaking on "Building World Security," Chester Williams, a deputy adviser to the United States mission to the U. N., said also that President Truman's point four program will be "more effective" if it is carried out through the U. N. because of better cooperation from other nations.

Pentagon Bus Review Asked Of High Court

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday announced it intends to ask the Supreme Court for a rehearing on the Pentagon fare reduction.

Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman filed a suggestion with the Supreme Court that it put its mandate on the case into effect immediately. The court's decision affirming the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission over the buses, amounted to a 70-cent weekly reduction for passengers who use the buses to and from the Pentagon five days a week.

A 25-day waiting period is usually allowed for answers to be filed after Supreme Court rulings. E. C. Giddings, Capital Transit vice president, said his company has asked the Supreme Court to hold its mandate pending rehearing.

Tito Bars Freeing Archbishop Stepinac

Belgrade, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito told five Americans today he would not free Archbishop Aloysius Stepinac, who is now serving his fourth year of a 16-year prison term for collaboration.

Ira Hirschmann, former UNRRA inspector general, quoted Tito as saying Archbishop Stepinac rendered great harm to the state.

Irked, O'Dwyer And Ex-Model Shorten Holiday

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Mayor William O'Dwyer, still peeved at the "intrusion" of newsmen, today said he and a pretty former model were neither engaged nor married.

O'Dwyer planned to abandon his weekend holiday, but bad weather delayed his return to New York City.

The 59-year-old mayor and Miss Sloan Simpson, 33, took a walk for "some fresh air" after news reached the fashionable Gideon Putnam Hotel the plane to return them to the city would be late.

When the impulsive mayor found out the plane would be delayed indefinitely, he and Miss Simpson decided to stay overnight at the hotel.

Reporters, who had orders to tag O'Dwyer and Miss Simpson in the belief they were planning matrimony, continued to keep a watchful eye on the couple.

O'Dwyer had told newsmen earlier he and the pert fashion stylist had no immediate plans for marriage. Furthermore, he said, the press was intruding.

"Either you go or I will," he said.

"The whole thing is absolutely out of order," said O'Dwyer. "It is offensive to me and it is offensive to Miss Simpson."

been more unpretentious. The sole decorations were four sprays of white pompons and small chrysanthemums set against a background of ferns. The small Gothic chapel with its white plaster nave and dark paneling was illumined by four graduated groups of seven white candles, while the dull outdoor light was diffused through identical, beautifully designed ivory and sapphire blue stained glass windows.

The press, seated left of the center aisle, trickled in early. The bridal couple's 34 relatives, plus a number of the bride's intimate friends, arrived in groups shortly before 11 o'clock. Since there were no ushers most of them switched seats several times.

Finally, Mrs. Roy Rucker, the bride's mother, and two daughters, Ann and Jane, sat in the front left pew with Mr. Barkley's elder daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt and their four blue-suited young sons, in the second.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Gaylord Lyon, the bride's sister and brother-in-law, occupied the front right pew and behind them were Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, the bridegroom's younger daughter and son-in-law, 13-year-old Mimi MacArthur, and the Vice President's daughter-in-law, Mrs. David Barkley, and her very young daughter and son, Alben Barkley 2d and Dorothy Anne Barkley.

The organist, having run through such pieces as the Bach Arioso and Beethoven's Adagio Cantabile from the Sonata Pathetique, relaxed into "Love, Perfect Love" and "I Love You Truly" as a prelude to Wagner's Wedding March. As the first chords were struck Bishop Ivan Lee Holt of the Missouri area of the Methodist Church and Albea Godbold, pastor of St. John's, preceded Vice President Barkley and his son and best man David Barkley to the chancel stairs.

The beloved "Veep," in a trim black suit, with subdued black and white patterned tie and white carnation boutonniere, was as handsome and virile a bridegroom as any woman could wish. After the bridegroom and best man reached the chancel the center aisle door swung open and Mrs. Hadley, on the arm of her tall, dark, blue-eyed brother, walked slowly towards the altar.

Mrs. Hadley's Blue Suit

Mrs. Hadley wore a woolen suit of Barkley blue (a slatish powder blue), its short jacket curved in at waist line. Her tiny cloche hat of matching blue felt, its crown covered with blue veiling, was trimmed with a single moss rose its leaves realistically dewed with minute rhinestones.

Instead of a traditional bridal bouquet, Mrs. Hadley pinned a corsage of pink camellias to her lapel.

Her black suede opera pumps were extra high heeled and sheer smoke colored stockings showed her pretty ankles to advantage. Neither the Vice President nor his bride smiled as they moved close together at the chancel. The Rev. Godbold intoned the service in precise undramatic syllables and surely everyone in the audience amend when he said, "Your life will be full of joy and the home you are now to start will be one of peace."

The Vice President made his first response in his familiar hearty voice, the bride's " I will" was almost inaudible.

As they moved up the chancel stairs toward the altar Mr. Barkley gripped his bride's arm firmly half way between elbow and sholder. The bride, gaining assurance, made her responses firmly almost conversationally. Everyone joined in the Lord's Prayer, and at the ceremony end the Vice President and the new Mrs. Barkley just looked at each other but did not kiss.

Both Smile Broadly

As they turned, each was smiling the hapiest, most expansive smiles their features would physically allow. Half-way down the aisle, the bride and bridegroom started talking to each other. In the vestibule Mrs. Barkley struggled with her short gray fox jacket. "There should be two hooks but I can't find them," she said. The Vice President, smooth as silk, was waiting for his audience.

"They're anxious to see you, Jane," he said.

Mrs. Barkley found the hooks and both plunged into a delirious melee of cameramen, television boys, newsreel machinery, flashlights and portable microphones.

The green and white striped canopy over the sidewalk buckled with milling admirers.

"Did you touch him?" panted an elderly female with all the fervor of a bobbysoxr.

"He's a darling. Such lovely blue eyes and such curly hair," gasped another.

Richmond Coburn, one of the bride's oldest friends, helped shoo the crowd along. He'd had considerable practice the day before, and though an amateur at the fearful trade of public relations, had managed to keep the press happy, more or less in order and supplied with helpful releases.

Visit Mrs. Sayman

Reasonably undamaged by their fervent admirers, the Veep and his lady preceded by an impressive motorcycle escort, sped to the yellow brick Victorian residence of Mrs. T. M. Sayman at 5399 Lindell Boulevard where the press and cameramen were given free reign, and sustained most elegantly with champagne cocktails and caviar canapes. Upstairs the bride took off her jacket and hat "I don't care whether this looks right or not, I just want to be comfortable," the bride said. The second lady of the land looked very right. Her shortcut curly hair is flecked with gray with a bluish tint which harmonized with her blue eyes. She has a handy set of dimples, movie star teeth and a truly pink camellia complexion. Her suit blouse, cut in deep V, was of blue satin.

At the waistline she wore her new pair of diamond clips. Her other ornaments were a diamond wristwatch and her emerald cut rectangular aquamarine engagement ring which she wore on her right hand so everyone could admire her wedding band. It's about half an inch broad paved with three rows of baguette diamonds stiffened with seven tiny narrow diamond set bars.

A Little Family Chaff

At the top of the stairs on her way down to her ordeal with the cameramen, Mrs. Barkley almost bumped into her new stepdaughter, Mrs. Truitt. "Hello ma," carolled Marion Truitt. "May I stay out late tonight?" "How late," laughed stepmamma. "Oh, about four a. m."

Mrs. Truitt continued, "After all I only kept your girl and my oldest son out until 2 a. m. this morning."

Downstairs the Veep was in his element, remembering everyone's name, dishing out just the right compliment, being his incredibly kindly self. "Just think of all this today," he said soberly, "before July 8th I never knew of her existence."

"It must have been fate," said a reporter helpfully.

"It certainly was," the bridegroom continued, "you know Jane originally planned to visit the Clark Cliffords several weeks earlier and if she had—I'd have been out of the city and would never have met her. You know," he grinned, "I used to give a lecture about what would have happened if a certain thing hadn't happened at the time and the way it did." Just then the bride, finished with her first round of television interviews, pushed her way through the crowd plaintively asking, "I want to find my husband."

Mr. and Mrs. Barkley stood together in Mrs. Sayman's elaborate pink walled, blue ceilinged, blue brocade curtained drawing room faced by a barrage of cameras and other paraphernalia including the most blinding portable lights. "Mr. Vice President won't you kiss Mrs. Barkley?" a cameraman asked.

Veep Bars Kissing

"No kissing," the Vice President answered pokerfaced. "I'm saving that for later," he twinkled. "Where are you going for your honeymoon," he was asked. "We don't know," he replied. "Dozens of hotels have been after us but we've made no reservations—we're just going to drift along."

While the interminable photographing and broadcasting continued guests, to keep from tripping on radio and light wires which crisscrossed the two main drawing rooms, drifted into the dining room. The dining table was covered with a cutwork and lace cloth, centered with a towering epergne filled with white chrysanthemums and white roses and garlanded with smilax studded at intervals with 10 enormous purple orchids, four giant gardenias and a flock of white rosebuds.

The wedding cake was set on a separate table petticoated with a floor length flounce of white taffeta trimmed with a rope of smilax and white rosebuds. The pedestal of the three layered cake was concealed with a pleating of white horsehair and topped with a bridal couple standing under an arch trimmed with two tiny silver bells. Alongside the cake was placed a white handled knife tied with a white ribbon bow.

Upstairs, in a room reserved for the bride were Mrs. Barkley's suitcases, packed but still open. Pinned to the inside lid of each one was a typewritten list of its contents and a large sachet, each one made in the shape of a different flower. Mrs. Barkley's "going away" costume was a gray wool coat dress trimmed with midnight blue velvet on the collar and what someone insisted were "Sahib cuffs."

Her small felt matching hat had an off-face sweep trimmed with coo feathers ombred from gray to white and accented with small lettuce green leaves. The bridegroom, who pretended to be miffed at the interest displayed in his bride's trousseau, turned to several lady reporters complainingly:

Veep Banters

"Nobody seems to care what my going-away costume is. I'll have to tell you—it's a perfectly beautiful gray suit," he said. During a pause the Vice President's gaiety increased, his kidding returned to normalcy. "She's one of my favorite women," he explained to those around him as each feminine reporter hove within range, "I might have loved her too if she hadn't been so cold hearted."

Throughout the reception Western Union messengers trailed in thick as ants with telegrams, cables, packages. To everyone's disappointment neither of the bridal couple had time to open a single present—not even the intriguing package from the White House.

After a delay which was almost unendurable to everyone except the happy, happy bridegroom, luncheon was served. The cake was cut to an accompaniment of the best Barkley oratory and, in a blinding shower of rice the bride and bridegroom sped off into what they hoped was at least brief privacy.

Hiss Calls Wadleigh Document Source

New York, Nov. 18 (AP). — Alger Hiss' attorney named former State Department aide Julian Wadleigh today as the source of any State Department secrets leaked to a pre-war Soviet spy ring.

Defense Attorney Claude B. Cross opened Hiss' second Federal perjury trial with the charge that Whittaker Chambers got his famed microfilmed pumpkin papers from Wadleigh—not from Hiss.

"The microfilm came from Julian Wadleigh," Cross told a jury of eight women and four men as he laid the cornerstone of his case. Hiss' first trial last spring ended with a hung jury.

Wadleigh admitted at the first Hiss trial that he was a Communist sympathizer for a time before he left the State Department. He said he slipped the Russian spy ring State Department documents from the same building where Hiss worked in those years before the war.

But he insisted he never took any documents from Hiss' office. He said Chambers might have gotten the pumpkin papers from him, but he didn't think so.

Chambers on Stand

Chambers was called to the witness stand late in the day. The former $30,000 a year senior editor of Time magazine was the fifth witness called by the Government. The others were minor figures.

Chambers recounted his early years in the Communist Party and said he met Hiss in 1934 in a Washington restaurant.

Later, he said, Hiss agreed to give him government secrets.

"Mr. Hiss told me he had the opportunity of using his position in the NYE (Senate Investigating) Committee for obtaining some State Department documents," Chambers testified.

"I told Mr. Hiss I wanted him to bring the documents to me. I don't recall the exact nature of the documents."

The Government, apparently anxious to save the meat of Chambers' testimony for next week, asked and obtained a weekend adjournment at this point.

Chambers, chief witness against the slim, 45-year-old Hiss, repeatedly has testified that he was a spy ring courier and that Hiss fed him secrets in wholesale fashion. Just as repeatedly Hiss has denied this. The first jury split eight for conviction, four for acquittal of Hiss on perjury charges.

The Government, in its opening statement of the second trial, insisted that Hiss, when he denied working with Chambers, "lied—lied twice."

The two-pronged perjury count accuses Hiss of lying when he told a New York grand jury that he did not give documents to Chambers and of lying again when he said he did not see Chambers after January 1, 1937.

Charge by U. S. Attorney

Assistant United States Attorney Thomas F. Murphy, a ruddy-faced giant of a man who prosecuted Hiss in the first trial as well, told the jury today:

"The question was put to Hiss—'Can you get State Department documents out, have them photographed and returned to you?'

"He said he could, he would, and he did," said Murphy.

Murphy contended that a Communist photographer filmed the documents and that they were returned through Hiss to State Department files. Added the prosecutor:

"This went on for a while, then they decided that they weren't getting enough. They decided to speed up production. Hiss was asked to take the papers home and have his wife copy them so they could have an accumulation of papers waiting for Chambers when he arrived."

Chambers first accused Hiss before a congressional hearing in the summer of 1948. Hiss denied the charges and sued the former Communist for libel.

It was then that Chambers dug from a hollow pumpkin on his Maryland farm the microfilms which he said were a record of the secrets he got from Hiss. These were the pumpkin papers.

Defense Presents Case

Cross, appearing for the defense for the first time at this trial, paced back and forth before the jury as he focused their attention on the main issue.

"If you do not believe Whittaker Chambers," he said, "the Government has not got a case.

"There will be two principal witnesses in this case—Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers. I haven't any doubt that you will never be able to reconcile the statements made by these two witnesses. At the end of the case, the problem will be who lied."

Chambers has testified that he finally broke with communism in the late 1930's, left the party and legitimately worked his way up to the senior editor's post with Time.

He since has left the weekly news magazine and now operates his own farm in Maryland.

Hiss' Career Outlined

Cross, a 56-year-old Boston lawyer, outlined for the jury Hiss' brilliant career in the State Department that ended after the war when he voluntarily resigned.

He described how the defendant worked his way upward through the Government. Hiss became one of the late President Roosevelt's trusted State Department advisers at the Yalta conference with Prime Minister Stalin in 1945.

"There will not be one whisper that he did not carry out his duties with the greatest fidelity," said the defense attorney, who replaced Lloyd Paul Stryker after the first trial ended.

Hiss left the State Department in 1947 to become president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He resigned that post after the grand jury indicted him in December, 1948.

Wadleigh, 44, worked in the trade agreement office of the State Department from 1936 to 1946. He said he never was a Communist but tried to help the Red spy apparatus until he cooled toward communism in 1939.

For part of that time, Hiss worked for Francis B. Sayre, then Assistant Secretary of State. He admittedly had access to high secrets of state.

Cross summed up by telling the jury:

"The microfilms which will be entered into evidence are not photographs of originals which went to Sayre's office. They are carbons which went to the trade agreement office where Julian Wadleigh was."

Judge Scolds Lawyer; Halts Bridges Trial

San Francisco, Nov. 18 (AP).—Federal Judge George B. Harris abruptly recessed court in the Harry Bridges case today as a defense attorney tried to argue with him about an opening statement.

The recess was expected to be brief.

Judge Harris scolded Defense Attorney Vincent Hallinan repeatedly as the lawyer continued a bitter narrative about "the enemies of Harry Bridges."

"I have never heard such matters before in an opening argument," the judge declared. "There is no place here for those vituperative remarks. . . . the court will have to step in. . . . An opening statement is not a sounding board to give vent to matters such as this."

The Government, which has the first turn at introducing testimony, had said it was ready to put on a witness whose words would "carry a real Sunday punch."

The prosecution is based on a Federal indictment accusing Bridges, head of the CIO Longshore Union, of perjury. It was the latest move by the Government to prove that Bridges was a Communist. Two immigration hearings have been held in an attempt to deport him to his native Australia. They failed.

Hallinan argued that "Bridges' enemies" have conspired to break him.

He tried to enumerate these "enemies" in his opening statement. Each was the subject of hot objections.

He referred to Harry Lundeberg, head of the AFL sailors union of the Pacific as "a Jack London character, a bucko, a man who has been arrested for assault in half the ports of the world; who has burned the ballots of his union." The Government objected and Judge Harris warned Hallinan again.

But a moment later he was back on the same theme. Union enemies, he declared, "not only employed a known thug and murderer to kill Harry Bridges, but they sent two men to New Orleans who did kill and murder a poor man who was an organizer for the CIO."

Hallinan quoted Tom Clark, then United States Attorney General now a United States Supreme Court justice, as having said in Milwaukee, June 26, "If we are successful in our prosecution of Bridges, it may be that we can break the Hawaiian situation without any intervention."

This apparently referred to the Hawaiian strike of longshoremen, which was settled recently after causing a long shipping tieup.

There were more objections and another scolding.

Hallinan bounced back, this time with a reference to "a mistress" of a waterfront union official.

It was there that Judge Harris, smarting under disregard of earlier admonitions, called the recess.

A jury of eight men and four women is hearing the case.

SECOND TRIAL—Alger Hiss and Mrs. Hiss arrive at Federal Court in New York City yesterday for the opening of his second trial on perjury charges

Miss Coplon Must Stand Trial; Judge Denies Defense Motions

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan threw out all defense motions today and told Judith Coplon she must stand trial on charges of conspiring to spy for Russia.

But the judge postponed until next Tuesday, at least, the opening of the trial of the former Government girl and her accused co-conspirator, Soviet engineer Valentin Gubitchev.

Ryan said he wanted to give Miss Coplon's lawyer, Archibald Palmer, a "reasonable opportunity" to approach the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in a new effort to have her arrest declared illegal.

With the week-long fight to prevent the trial now lost, Gubitchev, a United Nations employe, now suspended, suddenly changed his mind and decided to hire a lawyer.

Thought Case a "Provocation"

He told the court in a torrent of Russian that until now he had considered the case merely a "provocation"—that he hadn't thought it necessary to defend himself against "the fanciful tale of the Department of Justice and the FBI."

But, said the stubby defendant, he now wants a three-week adjournment in order to get counsel and prepare his defense.

Ryan turned him down on the adjournment plea. He said the Russian had plenty of time to get a lawyer since his arrest last March 4. But he added that he might change his mind if Gubitchev appeared with a lawyer next Tuesday.

Gubitchev and Miss Coplon were scheduled to go on trial last Monday on charges of conspiring to steal United States information with the intention of passing it to the Russians.

Palmer fought all week to prevent a trial. He contended that Miss Coplon was being put in double jeopardy—that the Government was seeking to try her for an offense of which she already has been convicted in Washington.

But the judge ruled that the charge now facing Miss Coplon—conspiracy—is different from the one on which she was convicted.

In Washington, Ryan said, one count of the indictment accused her of copying, taking and obtaining vital Government information, while a second count charged her with unlawfully removing and concealing that information.

Young Democrats Face Rift

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 18 (AP). A showdown battle over President Truman's civil rights program appeared imminent late today at the national convention of Young Democratic Clubs.

The convention today reversed a previous stand that the issue might be brought to the floor without approval of the resolutions committee.

The resolutions committee then announced it would hold an open session. A resolution specifically indorsing the rights program previously had been pigeonholed at a closed session of the committee.

If the committee again fails to adopt the rights resolution, its supporters presumably would be unable to bring the issue before the convention.

In between heated disputes over the rights issue, the convention heard addresses from Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, Governors Folsom of Alabama and Talmadge of Georgia, Lieut. Gov. George Nye of Ohio and William P. Kennedy, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The reversal to civil rights supporters came in a vote on an amendment to the report of the rules committee.

The rules committee yesterday recommended that no resolution be brought before the convention until it had been approved by the resolutions committee.

The Michigan delegation, which had submitted the pigeonholed resolution, asked that the rules committee report be amended.

By a vote of 311 to 156, the convention amended the report so that any resolution which had been properly submitted to the resolutions committee could be brought up on the convention floor, regardless of whether it had been approved.

A number of factors figured in the reversal of the convention.

CAA Modifies Its Ban On War-Type Planes

The Civil Aeronautics Administration yesterday modified its ban on combat-type aircraft at National Airport to affect "fighter-type" planes only.

The new order was teletyped to airmen by Administrator D. W. Rentzel. Its effect is to permit military aircraft converted to "plush" transports to continue using the airport.

The first order, issued Wednesday, would have excluded—as well as fighters—converted bomber planes used by industrialists and businessmen from the airport. It brought a storm of protest from private airplane owners, who would have no other place to land in Greater Washington.

One of the first groups to ask revision of the rule was the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association. A spokesman said 230 planes were affected.

The CAA said yesterday that further consideration showed that "converted military planes used by private citizens, such as B-17 and B-23 bombers, can be handled very well and mixed with other traffic at the airport."

In its revised ruling, the CAA said:

"No military or civil fighter-type aircraft and no other military aircraft except those authorized in accordance with arrangements made between the CAA and the Department of Defense or its agencies, shall use the Washington National Airport.

"This prohibition includes fighter-type aircraft that are now being operated under civil registration."

The agreement referred to is one in which the defense establishment restricted its use of the airport to planes used by President Truman and carrying "very important persons" and military officers above the rank of major general and rear admiral.

It also provided for the "lowest possible level of regularly scheduled flights which cannot for good reason utilize adjacent military landing areas, and flights requiring the use of customs and immigration services."

The agreement was dated July 1, 1949.

Further restrictions on traffic at National Airport were the outgrowth of the November 1 tragedy in which all 55 passengers aboard an Eastern Air Lines DC-4 were killed in a collision with a P-38 fighter flown by Bolivian Pilot Erick Rios Bridoux, the only survivor.

La Guardia, Idlewild Bar Fighter-Type Planes

New York, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—The New York Port Authority tonight banned all fighter-type aircraft from Idlewild and La Guardia fields, New York City's two principal airports.

The Authority said "this applies regardless of ownership and regardless of whether or not modified or converted."

Ten Rescued As PBM Crashes Off California

San Diego, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—A twin-engined PBM Martin Mariner patrol plane crashed into the Pacific Ocean off Point Loma today but all 10 men aboard were saved.

The plane was on a routine practice flight, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

Pilot of the plane was Comdr. D. B. MacDiarmid, commander of the San Diego Coast Guard Air Station. Names of the crew members were not immediately announced. "We do not know the condition of the plane or how the men escaped," the spokesman said. "We do know that all hands are safe."

Some B-29s Are Grounded off at MacDill Air Force Base, Tampa, Fla., yesterday.

Vandenberg also directed that the B-29 modernization program, which has been going on for some time, be "accelerated sharply as another step to keep accidents to the minimum."

The B-29s are to be grounded at their home stations. Those temporarily at other bases are to proceed home under "maximum safe operating conditions."

The order was temporarily waived for the B-29s participating in the search for the Superfortress which has been missing in the Bermuda area since Wednesday.

The epidemic of B-29 disasters started early Wednesday when one with 20 men aboard crashed into the Atlantic off Bermuda. That night two of the Superforts collided over Stockton, Calif.

Earlier today, a fourth B-29 crashed in Tampa, Fla., bay while taking off from MacDill Air Force Base to join in the vast air search for possible survivors of the Bermuda disaster.

Four men survived today's crash, the first serious mishap of the monster search off Bermuda for the 20 men aboard another B-29 which sent a frantic SOS and was swallowed up by the Atlantic Wednesday.

Today's dead were identified at Walker Air Force Base, Roswell, N. Mex., home field of the B-29. They were First Lieut. Victor Theil, the pilot; First Lieut. Kenneth Fallek, First Lieut. John W. Gillespie, jr., First Lieut. Raymond Weise and Staff Sergt. Andrew J. Steinman, Riverside, Pa.

The four survivors suffered shock, bruises and lacerations. They are Capt. S. L. Pearson, Staff Sergt. G. T. Ellis, Sergt. J. D. Hendricks and Sergt. F. E. Fintland.

The B-29 was out of the 509th Heavy Bombardment Group stationed at Walker Air Force Base.

Life Raft Believed Seen in Sea Search

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 18 (AP). A search plane reported late today it had spotted a yellow object, believed to be a life raft, in the area of the Atlantic where a United States Air Force B-29 is supposed to have crash-landed Wednesday with 20 men aboard.

Load of 103 Sets Atlantic Flight Mark

Marham, England, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—An Air Force C-74 Globemaster landed today with 103 persons aboard, the largest number ever to fly the Atlantic in a heavier-than-air craft.

The 82-ton plane, The Champ, left Mooile, Ala., 23 hours earlier and settled down at this Norfolk air field after thundering over fog-shrouded southern Maryland.

(Brookley Air Force Base, Mobile, announced that another C-74 with 100 men aboard will take off for Marham at 9:15 (CST) tonight.)

Visibility at this American-occupied Royal Air Force base was down to 2¼ miles when the plane touched down. Most southern and western England airports were blacked out by fog.

Chief Pilot Capt. John Kelly of Mobile, and West Palm Beach, Fla., cautiously circled the field for more than a quarter of an hour before he brought the plane in at 7:35 p. m. (2:35 p. m., EST).

Aboard were 12 other crew members and 90 passengers—U. S. Air Force airmen and technicians reporting for duty with the U. S. Air Force Third Air Division in England.

The four-engine plane arrived at this air base 85 miles northeast of London after 5200-mile flight via Gander, NF., where it stopped for four hours.

The plane left Mobile at 3:35 p. m. (EST) yesterday.

The previous trans-Atlantic air passenger record was 90 also set by an Air Force Globemaster.

Other crew members ineluded Lieut. Wallace Larking, Palatka, Fla., first pilot; Capt. Donald K. Mehan, Mineola, N. Y., second pilot, and Capt. James A. Conventry, Akron, Ohio, navigator.

Issues In China

Mr. Bevin has removed the suspicion that precipitate action on the recognition issue in China will be forthcoming from the British government. "I think," he said, "a combined decision in which a large number of people cooperate in this business is much the best," and he added that it should not be "hurried." Mr. Bevin did not pledge adherence to a common policy with the United States, nor, according to Secretary Acheson, is there any intention on America's part of asking for it. The September talks in Washington, it seems, included an informal pledge to take counsel together, and this is reaffirmed.

China is the most complex of the situations confronting the modern world. It is muddling even such a statesman as Mr. Churchill. Mr. Churchill would give the Communists de facto recognition, though, as Mr. Bevin said the previous day, that is precisely what the British have been trying to establish, only to have their attempts at contact repeatedly rejected. This applies no less to the State Department. Our consul in Peking has been authorized to get in touch with the Peking government, but the consul never goes beyond the outside door, at which he leaves his communications. Evidently the Chinese Communists insist on de jure recognition, or nothing.

The Chinese, intoxicated with their ability to "get away with it," are giving vent to their pathological and traditional anti-foreignism with childish irresponsibility. Manifestations are occurring in both Nationalist and Communist China. The Nationalists, with seacraft given to them as items in the aid-to-China program, are taking pot shots at both British and American trading vessels, and now say they will bomb any vessels found in the Formosa Straits. As for the Communists, they are keeping our consular staff under arrest in Mukden. Both are "outrages," to use Mr. Truman's word, and outrages committed against American interests require measures of defense.

This does not mean the military intervention for which some hysterical voices are being raised. A calm consideration of what would be entailed by that process would show that any such adventure as forcing an entry into Mukden would be quixotic. Manpower and resources would have to be diverted to an area which, in our view, still ranks third after western Europe and the Middle East in strategic priorities. And the end result would be a dead Angus Ward and an endless grapple with chaos in China, if not a war with Russia, which, clearly, is in control of Manchuria. To get this country bogged down in the Chinese quagmire, as Russia herself was in 1927, is precisely the aim of the Kremlin.

At one time or other, undoubtedly, a show of force will be necessary in defending American interests in the Far East. Justice without force, as Pascal says, is impotent, and a bandit situation does not allow of the same treatment as a normal situation. A long time ago we pleaded for a military posture — anticolonial, noninterventionist purely defensive—in that area, including the assumption of control over Formosa, pending a peace treaty with Japan. With this military posture, American shipping would have found protection as it went on its lawful errands. But all that has been done is to say that the United States does not recognize the Nationalist blockade of China's ports, and then to make it effective by abject acquiescence. Failure to follow through has encouraged the Nationalists to threaten to drive the United States out of the China Sea.

Politics is, as a wit says, the art of making the best of the inevitable. Translate this in terms of the confusion in China, and it means that we must get Chiang Kai-shek off our necks, disown the Nationalists as the Chinese themselves have, tell Admiral Radford to enforce this country's international rights on the high seas against Chiang's cockle boats, and then send Mr. Jessup to Peking to talk business with the Communist government, to which we have never even accorded belligerent rights. American diplomacy has no standing till it has relieved itself of involvement in the chaos which has engulfed China.

The present confusion has arisen because from the start there has been a preoccupation with everything except American rights. What is faced in China is in its essence little different from what had to be contended with in prewar days. But in those days Admiral Yarnell had a large measure of diplomatic and military authority in dealing with emergencies. No Yarnell could operate under the present centralism. There must be more man-on-the-spot reliance for dealing with emergencies within a framework of policy, in place of the paralysis involved in day-to-day referrals to Washington for instructions that when and if they arrive are likely to be too late.

While The Iron Is Hot

Washington's various citizen groups supporting the Kefauver home-rule bill are girding their loins for a drive to secure 218 signatures on the petition that will be necessary to dislodge the bill from the House District Committee. That is good news, for every ounce of strength that the community can muster will be needed to get the bill before the House. The home-rule movement is running into the severest test it has yet had to meet.

It is widely conceded that if the bill comes before the House next year it will be passed. Since it had already passed the Senate, and the President is known to be favorable to it, the one big undertaking is to dislodge the bill from the committee. In pursuit of that objective the home-rule boosters are trying to bring influence to bear upon many Congressmen through their constituents at home. That is a sound approach. But we hope they will remember that interest in the matter in distant States is likely to reflect the interest that is manifested right here in the voteless District itself.

We have always been convinced that if the people of the District, through their citizens' associations, their labor unions and numerous civic groups, present their demands to Congress in impressive form, they can scarcely be turned down. For this movement has as its purpose relief of Congress from an intolerable burden as well as democratization of the Capital City. If the campaign is made sufficiently impressive, the noise will be heard in the States and Congressmen may well conclude that failure to sign the home-rule petition will be a handicap in the 1950 election. But the groups sponsoring this movement will have to work fast. The next four or five months are crucial, and if the measure cannot be forced onto the floor of the House in that time, home rule will suffer a very serious setback.

Allegorical Diplomacy

That was a happy and encouraging interlude the other day at Lake Success. Instead of the usual exchange of vituperation and insult that has become almost ritualized in the New Diplomacy, there was resort to something like the method of the Gospels; that is to say, to the method of making one's points by parable. The occasion was the debate over Mr. Vishinsky's proposal for a new five-power peace pact.

Mr. Hector McNeil, Britain's representative, was reminded of a story related by the Russian fabulist Krylov. It seems, he said > that a poor serpent was unhappy because everyone in the garden was afraid of him and he concluded that the fear was due to his unfortunate voice. So the serpent pleaded with Jupiter to give him the voice of a nightingale; and so Jupiter endowed him. Up the tree then went the serpent and draped himself round an attractive bough and started singing with all the warmth and seductive charm of the nightingale. By and by, all the birds of the forest came creeping around, charmed by this strange music from the large stranger there. But none came near him. So the serpent asked angrily: "Do you dislike my voice?" "No," said the starling, "it is melodious and wonderful, and you sing as well as a nightingale. But I must confess to you that our hearts were troubled when, as you sang, we saw your sting. We enjoyed hearing you, but please sing a little farther away from us."

Whereupon Mr. Vishinsky politely retorted with another fable from Krylov, which he said the committee might interpret as it pleased.

> The snake and the slanderer engaged in a solemn argument about which should go first, and each said the honor should be his. The problem came before Beelzebub, and he had to adjudicate it. . . . Beelzebub said to the snake, "Although I recognize the merit of your case, yet I must justly assign precedence to him. You are evil and most deadly with your fang, but you cannot wound from afar like the deadly tongue of the slanderer, from which there is no escape even though mountains or oceans intervene. It is clear that he is more evil, so, give place to him." Since then slanderers have been more honored than snakes in hell.

Thus were the Messrs. McNeil and Vishinsky able to insult each other in a perfectly nice way. Mr. McNeil had implied that the barbaric manners of the Soviet leaders toward all those in their power had made them generally disliked; and that the feeling about them now is that they can't be trusted, not least when they begin talking sweetly. Mr. Vishinsky was saying in effect that every criticism of Soviet methods was just another example of bourgeois malice and mendacity.

We hope, though, alas, with no great confidence, that the debate continues in this strain, with everybody searching out appropriate anecdotes from Aesop, La Fontaine, Perrault, and the Brothers Grimm. Thus when the question of the alleged passport forgeries and the smuggling of Russian spies or M. V. D. in and out of Western countries needs to be raised in the Assembly, it will be done merely by reciting the tale of Little Red Riding Hood. And when the matter of some foreigner's wife refused the right to accompany her husband out of Russia comes up, somebody might relate the story of the princess kept prisoner by the dwarf. Or when it is a question, as it was at the time of the McNeil-Vishinsky exchange, of Russian international policy in general since the Tehran Conference, somebody might recall the story of the Arab and the camel.

Interstate Fares

Thousands of Washingtonians will benefit from the decision of the Supreme Court last Monday restoring the joint 16-cent fare between Capital Transit lines and the bus companies operating between the District and Virginia. The question that arises about the decision is not the desirability of this joint fare but the confusion of jurisdiction between the ICC and local regulatory bodies that is likely to result from the decision. If this interpretation of the Motor Carrier Act is to stand, the Interstate Commerce Commission would appear to be free to take control of intrastate transportation in many parts of the country.

When the ICC first ordered a through fare for the entire trip between District residential areas and the Pentagon (also other defense establishments on the Virginia side of the Potomac), the Capital Transit Co. was operating one of the bus lines carrying passengers into Virginia. Unquestionably it was operating in interstate commerce. In these circumstances the ICC compelled Capital Transit to give transfers that would be good on the competitive bus lines running into Virginia as well as on its own bus line. The Supreme Court upheld that action. But in 1947 Capital Transit abandoned its District-Virginia bus line, and the District Court then held that all the company's traffic was intrastate and not subject to ICC orders.

The Supreme Court has now overturned this ruling on the ground that Capital Transit's carriage of passengers wholly within the District is part of "a continuous stream of interstate transportation." Technically, the stream can scarcely be regarded as continuous, since passengers have to change from local streetcars to Virginia buses. More important, as pointed out by Chief Justice Vinson's dissenting opinion, supported by Justices Reed and Jackson, is the fact that Congress specifically restricted the pertinent provisions of the act to the transportation of passengers or property by motor carriers engaged in interstate or foreign commerce."

It is a basic constitutional principle that Congress may control intrastate traffic whenever that becomes essential to orderly regulation of interstate commerce. But as a practical matter Congress has been loath to interfere with local regulations unless the national interest demands it. The Chief Justice believes that in the Motor Carrier Act Congress did not seek to exercise all the power it has over intrastate traffic. By sweeping under ICC control local carriers who incidentally feed interstate transportation systems the court has opened the door to a great deal of confusion. "Its unlimited language," the Chief Justice said, "sweeps into the hands of the commission [the ICC] the regulation of all local transportation that carries a large proportion of passengers destined for or arriving from out-of-State points."

Soldiers' Medicine

Free medical care for military dependents is an obvious target for the economy drive in the armed forces. The potential savings, however, seem to us more apparent than real. Unquestionably, if the suggestion of Budget Director Pace were adopted and such privileges eliminated, a good many million dollars could be cut from the budget. But this economy might well be accomplished, as the Personnel Policy Board fears, at the expense of an impairment of morale so severe as to cause more harm than good.

There can be no doubt that care of dependents is a tremendous burden on military medicine. At some bases it consumes a major portion of doctors' time, and this fact is one reason why the armed forces are critically short of medical officers. Nevertheless, the privilege is of long standing. More than 60 years ago Congress authorized care for Army dependents in an appropriation bill. Care for Navy dependents is even more specifically provided by law.

As a result, many men have enlisted with the assurance that their families would receive free medical care. The practice has become so universal as to constitute a moral obligation. To be sure, with the new pay raise military personnel are now roughly on a par with other Government workers who do not enjoy such privileges. Nonetheless, the elimination of free medical care was not listed as a justification for the pay raise. The sudden elimination of what has been regarded as one of the perquisites of a military career would be construed widely as a breach of faith.

This is not to say that steps cannot be taken to reduce the load. In addition to receiving free medical treatment, military dependents now are charged only about $1.75 a day for hospital care. It would be entirely reasonable to require military personnel to pay a larger share of the hospital cost on a scale graduated to income. Moreover, the establishment of nominal fees for medical care on the first visit, similar to those imposed by Group Health in Washington, might help confine the work of doctors to real rather than imaginary ailments.

FREEDOM'S TRUMPET

Nothing is conquered, nothing lost
Till the spirit of man is dead.
Tanks may level and bombs may fall
But the brave shall be comforted.

Land may be taken and ships sent down
But ships have gone down before
And land can be had by its own again
If its own stand fast on their shore.

To freedom's trumpet heroes rise
To be by heroes led—
For nothing is conquered, nothing lost

AMA's Allies

A "grass-roots conference" will be an important part of our American Medical Association's interim session to be held here December 6-9. It is purposed to keynote the superiority of voluntary health insurance over compulsory political methods. Speakers will include top officials from the American Legion and the United Mine Workers. They will be spokesmen who will prove our AMA thesis by describing the success of voluntary programs their respective organizations have sponsored. Their prominence raises the question: Wi" the roots of this conference be only as deep as grass? Or were they purposed to be as ubiquitous as grass?

If our AMA is seeking a mandate from the grass roots, it should not identify its program with either AL or UMW. Both organizations symbolize cynical disdain for the welfare of anyone but their own greedy self-interest.

Organized medicine may not applaud or emulate selfish partisanship without assuming its inevitable liabilities. Every time we identify our program with politicians instead of principles we stand to go down in defeat on collateral issues.

What should be the role of organized medicine in sponsoring voluntary methods of national health security insurance? It should be the conscientious and fearless role of consumer counsel. We should play the devil's advocate to any weakness in our own program and any threat of state dictatorship in the President's.

The doctor-workers of this Nation have examined Mr. Truman's all-encompassing compulsory state-medicine scheme and charge him with either inconsistency or insincerity. He is inconsistent when he prosecutes doctor-workers for criminal monopoly under the antique Sherman Antitrust Act of 1890, then denies them the immunities guaranteed all workers under the National Labor Relations Act.

Mr. Truman is insincere in denying his scheme is state medicine. It is the spitting image of England's frankly socialistic compulsion. If he put it over, doctor-workers will be the first indentured servants of his share-the-wealth state.

The American Legion and the United Mine Workers are the kind of assets politicians use in march to dictatorial power. Let organized medicine have the moral courage to leave them alone.

Quarantined Dogs

Your November 16 issue carries the announcement that all dogs in Prince Georges County are to be quarantined to the extent of not being permitted to roam at large and must be on a leash held by a responsible and capable person. This is due to another rabies scare.

This rule should also apply to hunting dogs. Daily, now, streams of hunters stalk through our property. Each group is accompanied by four to eight rabbit dogs. Hunting dogs are as likely—and more likely—to contract rabies than a house pet. Squirrels and rabbits are known to be rabid and dogs hunting these animals may easily contract this dread disease.

Our dogs are pets, are properly licensed and yearly inoculated against rabies by our veterinarian. We do not permit our dogs to roam at large on other people's property. They are never off our acreage unless on leash. All responsible pet owners and hunting dog owners as well—should do likewise.

A. B. & W. Schedules

Why can't the A. B. & W. Transit Co. put some sense in its schedule on a holiday like Armistice Day, when the stores are open and many persons are working even though the Government offices are closed?

I waited from 5:30 to 6 p. m. at Constitution ave. and 14th st. for a bus to Fairlington, only to have the two that came along pass me up because they were full.

I had to walk to the terminal at 12th and Pennsylvania and board a bus at 6:20 p. m.. This bus started out full, too, and did not pick up a single passenger along the way.

A. B. & W. was running buses at 20-minute intervals at a time when the stores were emptying and many non-Government workers were heading home. This is the same schedule it runs during the dull hours of the day.

Dangerous Flying

It is the opinion of many persons living in the area of the National Airport that bad flying practices have been going on for far too long a time and it took a terrible catastrophe to wake up the CAA to its laxity in enforcing safe flying practices.

Planes of every description are coming and going at all times—Army, Navy, passenger planes, cargo planes, private planes and sightseeing planes. Now it develops that the airport is used for testing fighter planes.

Many complaints have been sent to the CAA regarding the low flying of planes especially over the Memorial blvd., coming in from the west. About three weeks ago the writer was coming from Washington on a bus. A Northwest air liner went right over the top of the bus. This was reported. A few days after another plane came over very low. In both instances the weather was very sunny and clear.

According to the CAA—"we do not condone any type of flying that may be a hazard to persons or property" . . . .

Take a look at the record. It speaks for itself.

Atlantic Union Solution

Four recent developments indicate that a union of the Atlantic democracies has now become a practical issue. The first of these is the North Atlantic Pact, which provides in Article 2 a juridical springboard for steps towards Atlantic Union.

The second is the Atlantic Union resolution, introduced into Congress last July by 20 Senators and 5 Representatives. This requests the President to invite Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg to join us in sending delegates to a convention to explore how far we can apply among ourselves within the United Nations the principle of free federal union. Hearings on this resolution are expected in early 1950.

The third is the formation of the Atlantic Union committee, headed by Justice Owen J. Roberts, former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and former Undersecretary of State Will L. Clayton and a Nation-wide council of distinguished Americans.

The fourth is the discovery that Russia can make atomic bombs.

Despite all our efforts since 1946, the security of our cities and their inhabitants, now that Russia can make the bomb, is actually less than it was then. Armament costs have unbalanced our budget in a period of full employment. Aid to Europe has averted European collapse, but western Europe will still lack the dollars required for essential imports when the Marshall Plan ends.

These problems could be solved by an Atlantic Union, formed by the free peoples of the Atlantic area and open to the adherence of other free peoples by common consent. Its formation, as our own history indicates, would require pooling of some elements of sovereignty, such as conduct of foreign policy and defense, regulation of intraunion and foreign trade, power to issue currency and limited taxing power.

The Atlantic Union, by bringing 80 percent of the world's productive power under one roof, would possess an enduring security which no nation or alliance can hope to achieve. Its wide dispersion of productive centers and offensive bases would remove any danger that it might be paralyzed by a surprise atomic attack. More and more it is becoming clear that the best way to prevent war is to convince the rulers of Russia they cannot win.

Because the union would be so secure, its military forces could safely be considerably less than the total its member peoples would require separately. The military efficiency of its forces, moreover, would be multiplied by unification, unified command, standardization of weapons and specialization. As a result, annual defense costs could be cut many billions.

In the economic field, the union would end the currency problem for all its member peoples. Once the necessary adjustments had been made, it would provide one huge market twice as large as the United States wherein mass production and specialization, which have so raised our American standard of living, could flourish freely. This would bring all its peoples lower living costs and greater purchasing power. Business expansion and confidence in the future could be counted upon to open up vast new fields for private investment.

One of the most difficult and dangerous problems facing us now is the future of Germany. Atlantic Union could solve this problem once and for all by including the western Germans among its member peoples. This would bring German productive capacity into the union and could make German manpower available to its forces. It would do so safely because the Germans, after they were in, could not again discard democratic institutions for dictatorship.

Finally, the union would grow progressively as other free peoples adhered. This process would expand the area of freedom in the world, reversing the tide of the postwar years. It would also increase progressively the security and prosperity of the union, enhancing its attraction on all outside peoples including those now under Russian control.

Saving Man's Servants

By Malvina Lindsay

World Food Drama

DR. K. V. L. KESTEVEN is a wiry, unobtrusive, middle-aged man who would seem to belong to the jogtrotting, home-at-six set. Yet now you see him, now you don't. One day he may be hurrying along the halls of the Food and Agriculture Organization's modernistic headquarters on Connecticut ave. and within a week be astride a mule in the foothills of the Himalayas. Or between hall encounters with his colleagues, he may have been in Bangkok or Nairobi.

His flights, sans uniform and glamour, are part of a dramatic war against hunger. Staff veterinarian of the FAO, he is one of the couriers who answer emergency calls when death threatens animals and plants in some region where they are the main bulwark against famine.

Ironically enough, animals and plants are also now being potentially marked for destruction in germ warfare preparations. Yet, as FAO's scientists point out, it was a wartime project (designed to protect the 60 million cattle in the United States and Canada) that gave them their vaccine technique against rinderpest, by means of which tney are saving many an ox and water buffalo of Asiatic farmers.

WITHIN recent days this vaccine was rushed to Formosa to save that island's 300,000 water buffalo and cattle. The call, coming to the State Department, was referred to FAO, which arranged for Dr. Robert Reisinger of ECA, who was leaving for the Far East to combat hog cholera, to pick up in Hongkong rinderpest virus sent there from Bangkok.

And Dr. Kesteven is back from a recent whirl that took him first to South Africa to pick up virus, then to India where he traveled successively by plane, railroad train, motor car and mule, carrying in a flask the precious animal lifesaver, packed in dry ice, to the foot of the Himalayas to stop an outbreak of rinderpest.

These men who rush vaccine, medicine or technical skill to the ends of the earth are not as spectacular as those being equipped to fly bombs. But if mankind can buy enough time, their work may help make the bombs obsolete. The rinderpest project of FAO is a direct attack on the most vulnerable areas of the earth on one of the chief causes of war—hunger. For often in the Far East only a water buffalo shared by several families stands between its owners and starvation.

Norris E. Dodd, director-general of FAO, points out in his report to be presented at the fifth annual conference of FAO beginning here next week that many a farmer of the East has nothing but a small patch of soil, a wooden plow, one or two hoes, spades or sickles, and "if he is lucky," a part interest in a water buffalo. If anything happens to the animal, production goes down to a pitiful level. If the disease spreads among other cattle the entire region may succumb to famine.

SINCE 85 percent of the farmers of the world depend on animals—chiefly oxen, yaks, water buffalo, camels, reindeer—for draft work and for food, saving these servants of man is the most immediate attack on hunger. Eventually machines may come to all farms. But that will not be soon, since as late as 1947 tractors represented only 15 percent of draft power on farms in the United States.

The more of these animals saved, the better chance to stop the gulf between the earth's rich and poor from yawning wider. For among nations the rich are getting richer and the poor poorer—always an explosive situation.

Looking over the last 50 years, Mr. Dodd finds that despite two major wars and the worst depression in history, people in the more advanced nations, which contain one fourth of the world's population, can buy more than their parents could in 1900. They have better diets, better living. Yet the other three fourths live about as poorly as did their grandparents. The country with a certain level of wealth has the means to become more prosperous. It's the old story of spending money to make money. Meanwhile, population also gains in its race against food.

Yet the director-general, telling of his inspection trips over the world, where he saw so much human misery, is still hopeful. "I saw how easily," he says, "a start could be made to better conditions." Saving a poor farmer's water buffalo is a part of that start. What is more, it may save the weary drudging wife and children of that farmer from having to pull the plow themselves.

People's Car

Mr. Henry Kaiser is to be congratulated on getting that RFC loan to finance a people's car. Goodness knows we have waited for one long enough. First, Hitler said the German government would come out with a volkswagen. I was all set to import one but the United States Army had to queer the deal. Then Tucker took up the standard and I was all set again, but the United States Department of Justice had to put a stop to that. But good old Henry is coming through, and at last m dream will come true. Just think, a car for about $1000. As a taxpayer I figure I've already paid about $750 on ., leaving me only a balance of $250, and who could ask for a better deal than that? Now if the RFC would just lend me that $250.

Travel In Yugoslavia

By Marquis Childs

Rocky Road To Belgrade

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia—The few foreigners who travel from the western border of Yugoslavia to Belgrade are given to debating ways and means of making the journey. They boast about adventures and narrow escapes from one peril or another.

Childs

There is, of course, Swiss Air, which flies in and out once a week. Every Wednesday the Yugoslav airline flies the same route and the Yugoslavs are now conducting test flights to extend their service to Paris and London.

But if you decide against the air, then there are two choices. One is to take the Orient Express either direct from Paris or from Trieste, which is on the Yugoslav border.

My wife and I had our sleeping-car reservations from Trieste. You leave at 2 a. m. and you arrive here in the late evening of the same day, which is pretty slow going for a distance of less than 400 miles. Then we began to hear tales about the so-called express.

The one sleeping car is on the front of the train, the diner on the rear. Between are six or seven third-class coaches with no connecting corridor. So the sleeping-car passenger who wants to go to the diner must get out of the train and walk along the station platform to reach the last car.

Or, to put it more accurately, he runs as hard as he can since he has no way of knowing how long the train will stop at a village station. It may be a minute or an hour. If it's a minute he may find himself left on the platform as the train pulls out with all his bags. Other inconveniences and hazards were pointed out to us.

AT THIS point along came William McClure, an adventurous young cameraman for Pathe News who specializes in hard-to-get action pictures in remote places. He was driving to Belgrade in a new 1949 Chevrolet with extra gas tanks, extra tires and extra just about everything you could think of.

Bill urged us to come with him, arguing that we would see much more of the country traveling by car. We certainly did.

For the first 30 or 40 miles there are good highways, built when this western zone was, first, part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and, later, belonged to Italy. When you leave that highway, you get onto rutted mountain roads of the kind that have all but disappeared in America. It was raining hard, a rain that was turning to snow.

Then we had a puncture. Bill fixed it expertly. But as he was tightening the last lug, the lug wrench broke in such a way as to be useless. That was one "extra" Bill had not brought along. Another puncture would mean we were stranded.

We made Zagreb, 140 miles from Trieste, in the late afternoon. The official government tourist bureau had no road map—that was one of the lacks which had worried us most—and they didn't know where we could get a map. The real problem was to get a new lug wrench before we started out in the morning. Bill finally found a garage man who improvised one that might have worked. Fortunately it wasn't necessary.

WE LEFT Zagreb on a 25-mile stretch of the new six-lane auto highway now said to be nearing completion. There were no signs to tell us where to turn off when that stretch ended. We started out on what seemed to be a cow path and ended up on a narrow-gauge railway track in our effort to find the old road. With luck and Bill's skillful driving we finally made it.

Then began a trip that took me back to my boyhood in Iowa. Slipping, sliding and bumping along through the never-ceasing rain and snow, we passed through tiny villages when an occasional antiquated truck was the only motor-driven vehicle anyone ever saw. Farmers got out of their carts to try to hold their rearing, plunging horses. Every time we stopped, a small crowd gathered to gaze in awe and wonder at that 1949 Chevrolet.

An extra hard bump that broke any vital part of the car would, as we were all aware, hold us up not for hours but for days. When we got to Belgrade after 12 hours of almost continuous driving, there was considerable wonder that we had done it in that time. One of the tales we heard on our arrival was of the two correspondents who had had a mishap on the same journey and had spent the night in a Croatian peasant's farmhouse, sharing a not-very-wide double bed with the farmer, his wife and 6-year-old daughter.

The last stretch into Belgrade was on the new auto highway. Its completion between Zagreb and the capital has been announced for November 28 with a national celebration led off by a speech from Marshal Tito. The new highway will be as good as any in the world, comparable to the Pennsylvania Turnpike. Thus, in effect, Yugoslavia intends to jump from the horse-and-buggy era to the present, and that is true of almost every phase of the ambitious program Tito is trying to put over.

Hoyas Parade by Torchlight . . .

PREGAME RALLY—Georgetown University students carrying torches stream across Key Bridge in last night's pep-rally preparatory to the game with George Washington today in Griffith Stadium. Some 300 students took part in the orderly march

GU and GWU Get Pre-Game Warming Up

Collegians from George Washington and Georgetown Universities had a hot time in the cold town last night during warm-up festivities for the 1949 renewal of their traditional football rivalry.

A torchlight parade by some 500 Hoya supporters across Key Bridge and through Georgetown upset the normal flow of traffic along M st. and the normal routine at the Convent of the Visitation, 34th and P sts. nw.

Cries of let 'em out," to the accompaniment of a lusty chorus of "Fight Georgetown Men," brought clusters of schoolgirls to the windows and soft, but effective, warnings from the convent sisters to "go along home now."

The Hoya band and its followers marched through Georgetown and back to the university, where they dispersed.

Meanwhile, an equal number of George Washington students were paying tribute to their football gladiators at Lisner Auditorium, where a pep rally lasted until 9:30 p. m.

Wives of GW football players made a brief appearance on the stage, followed by President Cloyd H. Marvin, who said the sort of spirit that brings "victory in war will bring us victory tomorrow."

The band played "Hail to the Buff and Blue" as the rally broke up, and vigilant GW students kept an eye on the auditorium's white columns, where the letters H-O-Y-A have been known to appear in the darkness of the eve of the football classic.

White House Life

Dawson Tells How Truman Passes Days

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Work on reconstruction of the White House may start next week and President Truman probably will eat Thanksgiving dinner there in 1951.

This was the prediction yesterday of White House Administrative Assistant Donald Dawson, if the project has "good luck."

Dawson, a 1930 University of Missouri graduate, spoke at an alumni luncheon in the Sheraton Hotel. He said:

The President was nominated as No. 1 Quiz Whiz by the League of Women Voters recently when they tried to catch him on Missouri election laws.

He Stopped Walking

Mr. Truman had to discontinue walking between his White House offices and Blair House when the Secret Service learned a sightseeing agency was selling tickets.

Dawson said he had never seen the President lose his temper, "although the Lord knows he's had plenty of provocation."

Dawson contradicted one myth: That Clark Clifford writes all the President's speeches.

He explained that groundwork on each speech is done by the Government department most interested. Then "a number of fellows" sit down in the Cabinet Room to work up a draft.

When the speech reaches the final draft stage, Dawson said the President takes it home and "goes over the draft with his closest adviser, Mrs. Truman. Sometimes he comes back in the morning with a different idea altogether."

Woke Up the Bugler

Dawson said Mr. Truman has admitted that he was the man who had to wake the bugler up at Fort Sill, Okla. He said the presidential day starts between 5 a. m. and 5:30 a. m. Mr. Truman reaches his office at 8 a. m. and by 9 a. m. has completed his day's dictation. From 9 a. m. to 9:30, he confers with his advisers on domestic affairs, and from 9:30 to 10 a. m. he is briefed on the problems that may develop that day in the world situation.

"By 10 a. m. each day, the President knows more than anybody else in the world about what the domestic and world situation is," Dawson said.

"A Real Good Time"

At 10 a. m., his appointments start, and go on, at 15-minute intervals, until 1 p. m., when he has lunch. He takes a nap and returns to work at 3, frequently staying as late as 5:30 or 6. Mr. Truman goes to bed "when he gets tired," Dawson said, but frequently works until 10:30 or 11 p. m. before retiring. He likes to go out at night, Dawson said, and "has a real good time."

Dawson said he believed Mr. Truman to be the most active President the Nation ever had. He cited one instance during last year's campaign. Mr. Truman had made 27 speeches by 4:30 when he arrived in New York, and made 8 more that day, and was up and window shopping on Madison ave. at 11 the next morning.

He said he thought the secret of the President's charm is "that he is Harry Truman, not one iota of sham or pretense."

Fairfax School Cost Seen as $12 Million

Fairfax County's proposed school construction program—described as necessary by the fall of 1951—last night was tentatively set to cost nearly 12 million dollars.

The figure, which school officials emphasized is subject to revision, was announced at a meeting of the county school board and school emergency committee. Also present were members of the board of county supervisors.

Under the proposed building program, two new high schools and 15 elementary schools would be constructed. Of these, five elementary schools would replace current, old buildings.

Included in the nearly 12 million dollar figure is an item of $270,500 to pay for school sites. Equipments costs will run slightly over one million dollars of the total amount. Plans call for permanent brick construction.

The group decided to meet with school and P-TA officials over the county who helped draw up the building program to review the proposed outlay. At that time, the amount of the bond issue necessary to pay for it may be set.

F. W. Robinson, chairman of the school board and W. T. Woodson, school superintendent, said the program's fund could be spent by the end of 1952.

"We will need every one of the classrooms (called for in the building program) by fall of 1951," Woodson said.

G. Wallace Carper, chairman of the board of supervisors, asserted: "I believe this bond issue will pass, because people are more school-minded now than ever."

Proponents of the bond issue must get 1000 signatures on a petition asking for a county-wide referendum on the bond issue.

"I don't see any hope for the school situation in Fairfax County except a bond issue, W. Carper said.

He added that 83 percent of the county's $3.19 per $100 assessed valuation now goes for school purposes.

"The answer to our problem is a sales tax," he said.

Fairfax School Bond Plan Hit by Sen. Clarke

Virginia State Senator Andrew W. Clarke yesterday announced his opposition to the proposed $10 million or more school bond in Fairfax County.

Instead, he asserted it should first be determined how much money the county can obtain from the State Legislature which convenes early next year. He pledged to "fight for every dime we can get."

Senator Clark said he is confident enough funds will be forthcoming from the legislature to keep the county's school building program going for the next two years. He declined comment on how much money that might involve.

He said that Governor-elect John S. Battle has promised he will make available to the State's school systems more than 30 million dollars.

According to a Fairfax County school official, Senator Clarke has said he may be able to get as much as four million dollars from State funds.

Clarke declared, "No county is as desperate for school buildings as Fairfax." But, he added, he is opposed to any bond issue until he can determine from the legislature how much money will be made available to the county by the State.

The State retirement fund, which now contains about 18 million dollars, was suggested by the legislator as a source of school building funds. He said there is no reason the money cannot be invested in long-term loans to local school systems.

To Address Society

Robert Cook, editor of the Journal of Heredity, will address a meeting of the National Genealogical Society at 8 p. m., today at the Mt. Pleasant branch library, 16th and Lamont sts. nw. He will speak on "The Significance of Genetics in Genealogy."

pol was part of an administration program for school aid, and was arrived at after legislative wrangling and educators' pleas for money. Line answered the pleas with the pol and a 20-million-dollar direct grant fund to be distributed on a money matching basis.

On Absorb Shock

Both nearby Maryland counties appeared to have shock absorbers to meet the fund withdrawal.

In Montgomery, County Attorney David Macdonald said yesterday he foresees no drastic effect from the ruling even if the bond act stays dead.

He said that the Montgomery County Council, in legislative session last May, had passed an enabling act authorizing issuance of up to $5,465,000 worth of local bonds for school construction and other purposes. None of this authority has yet been used.

G. Gardner Shugart, Prince Georges County school superintendent, said he was "fully prepared" for the court's decision. Last year's Legislature enacted a special bill giving Prince Georges authority to float its own bond issues up to $10,600,000, he said. Such issues would bear commercial rate of interest.

Shugart said the county school board plans to use the legislation to finance projects started between now and the time the Legislature gets the 50-million-dollar bill straight.

He said one project on which bids already have been accepted, the $325,000 Mount Rainier-Brentwood Elementary School, has been approved by the county commissioners for such a bond issue.

soon, as well as by Falls Church officials.

A joint indorsement of the city's school loan has been signed by Fairfax School Superintendent W. T. Woodson, Fairfax School Board Chairman Fred Robinson, Falls Church Superintendent Irvin Schmitt and School Board Chairman Mrs. Mark Regan. It states:

More school facilities are unquestionably needed than can possibly be built under the proposed bond issues for both the city and the county . . . If either bond issue is defeated, it is certain that many children in Falls Church or Fairfax or both, will be severely overcrowded, will have to attend school in rooms not suited for classroom use, and may have to attend only one half day sessions."

Pointing up the need for the new facilities, school officials say, are preliminary statistics of a school survey in the area, which point to an all-time high" for school population.

Woman Asks Custody Of 6 Children in Suit

Mrs. Lucy Williams, 1108 3d st. ne., mother of 17 children, asked District Court yesterday to award her custody of 6 minor children and maintenance from Maurice Williams, 1513 7th st. nw. She says they married 27 years ago, and that 12 of the children are still alive, six of them being minors.

Southern Railway Restoring Trains

The Southern Railway announced last night it will restore next week 28 trains which were cut off due to the coal strike.

Some of the trains will go back into service on Monday, November 21, and the balance on Tuesday, November 22.

The trains, handled by coal burning locomotives, were taken out of service by orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission as a fuel saving measure when the strike was on. The miners have since gone back to work.

104th D. C. Polio Case Reported

The District's 104th case of infantile paralysis of the year was reported to the Health Department yesterday.

Latest victim is an 18-year-old girl of the 4900 block of Just st. ne., who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital Tuesday.

At this time last year, 128 cases had been reported in the District. Total number of cases reported this year in the Washington area is 240.

The Gold Bug

THE RUMOR that the United States intended to lower the gold content of the dollar was one of those stories which refuse to lie down and die, until President Truman last week finally denied it flatly.

The first big flurry of gold rumors started in July of this year. Despite official denial by Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder, and the pooh-poohing of Federal Reserve officials, they had by last week grown to subpanic proportions. For the first time in 15 years gold had reversed the direction of its flow. Nervous European and Latin-American countries in seven weeks bought 108 million dollars worth of gold, anticipating the devaluation of the dollar. France asked for, and got, a 75-million-dollar gold loan. Certain South American currencies fluctuated wildly.

Foreign traders insisted on contractual assurance from American importers that if we did devalue, payment would be made in dollars at present value. Speculation in gold shares sent mining stocks above the levels they had reached when sterling was devalued.

Official disclaimers did no good. Secretary Snyder pointed out that only Congress can devalue the dollar, and under the Bretton Woods Agreements Act neither he nor the President has authority to raise gold prices.

Nobody believed Snyder because nobody has much faith in official disclaimers, particularly after the embarrassing volte face of Sir Stafford Cripps last September. When Truman finally got around to his denial, gold stocks dropped abruptly.

WHY SHOULD anyone think we were planning to devalue the dollar?

The whole crop of stories seems to have started in London and other foreign capitals, where it was fed by wishful thinking.

Britain had an understandable interest in gold. Two Commonwealth nations, Canada and the Union of South Africa, are among the world's major gold producers. If the United States handed out more dollars for the gold they mined, it would of course make more dollars available to a dollar-hungry Commonwealth.

Trial balloons were floated. This move would not only benefit Britain, so the argument ran; it would benefit the United States, too. By a simple bookkeeping operation we could write up the value of the hoards in Fort Knox, and overnight the United States would be richer by billions of dollars.

When the trial balloons floated their way into the Washington press, a number of eyebrows were raised. It had taken American officials months to get foreign currencies down to present levels. Why should we forthwith cancel the whole effect of devaluation abroad by devaluing the dollar, too?

As for increasing Government funds by billions, it would certainly do that. Since these billions could then be the basis for a fivefold expansion of credit under our fractional reserve banking system, each billion of windfall could result in five billions of expanded money supply. At a time when we had barely succeeded in stopping inflation, this would be a startling policy to say the least.

As for the argument that paying more for gold would make millions available to foreign governments, the logical reply was: Which governments? ERP is a conscientious attempt to grant dollars to those nations which most need them. This hocus-pocus would give dollars to countries which are major holders or producers of gold, and to no others. To be specific, it would benefit Britain, Canada, South Africa, Switzerland and the Soviet Union.

THERE are few subjects which rouse more passion than the gold question. We have been bewitched by those gleaming billions in Fort Knox. Each year some new proposal is launched by those who, in the witty words of Allan Sproul, think they are the exclusive custodians of the Gospel According to St. Midas.

Sproul is president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. On November 2 he delivered an address to the American Bankers Association which was a devastating reply to the gold fanatics. It deserves to be widely read, if only for its style. Sproul scattered his grapeshot into every variety of gold crusader, from those who think that gold convertibility would cure all the ills of world trade, to the plain speculators who, owning gold mines, would love to see prices go up. His words were received with cold disapproval by the bankers.

Like everyone else, they have their cherished ideas of What To Do With Gold. The truth is that sooner or later most of us are bitten by the gold bug. It seems so much simpler to cure an ailing world with this magic metal than to find underlying solutions.

It is not too surprising, under the circumstances, that ordinary mortals should occasionally exercise their imaginations in this way. It is not even surprising that dollar-hungry London should do so. Ernest Bevin thought it might be nice if we simply redistributed all that useless gold to the rest of the world. We agree that it would be nice, but maybe he had better check with Congress first.

In the meantime, if responsible Washington officials are seriously considering any gold panaceas, we can only remark that they are in an ancient, if not precisely hard-headed, tradition. Medieval alchemists spent centuries looking for the philosopher's stone, and the Spanish conquistador Cabeza de Vaca actually thought he had seen the Seven Cities of Cibola, whose streets were reputed to be paved with the precious metal. On closer examination, however, the Seven Cities of Cibola turned out to be one of the more arid stretches of the Texas desert.

Crommelin Demands Clearance or Trial

ice may demand a court-martial either on himself or on any other person in the naval service." Anyway, Crommelin wrote to Sherman:

"It is respectfully requested that the public reprimand either be canceled completely and forever, and expunged from all naval files and records, or that I be given the opportunity to present the reasons for my actions before a group of officers in a general court-martial."

In his long and often passionate letter Crommelin renewed charges he had made previously that under unification "a small group of men" had seized power in the Defense Department and were actually preventing effective civilian control. These same people, whom he did not name, have laid down a "propaganda smokesereen," Crommelin charged, which prevented the public from knowing what actually was going on at the Pentagon. They give the civilian secretaries, he declared, just enough information to enable them "to make an intelligent decision the exact way the General Staff desires it to be made." He flatly accused "General Staff zealots" of planning to seize control from the civilian heads.

In his own behalf, Crommelin cited his long 26-year record as a naval officer to counter Sherman's contention in the reprimand that he had "brought into question his fitness to exercise command or to occupy a position of trust." He declared that no previous commander had questioned either. Crommelin wrote that Sherman's newness in the office of Chief of Naval Operations resulted in his not being fully acquainted with the situation here. Sherman was called from command of the Mediterranean Fleet to take the post recently after Admiral Louis E. Denfeld had been fired by President Truman at the request of Secretary Matthews.

McCarthy and Sutton Offer Defense Series

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, (R., Wis.) and Representative Pat Sutton (D., Tenn), said yesterday they are ready to serve as legal counsel for Navy Capt. John G. Crommelin if he is court martialed.

McCarthy, a World War II Marine captain and former Wisconsin judge, said he is "100 percent behind" Crommelin and would be pleased to "go down the line for him in a court martial."

The Senator is currently being treated at Bethesda Naval Hospital for a sinus condition.

Sutton, a former Navy officer who has previously defended Crommelin in House speeches, said in Chattanooga, Tenn., that he would consider it a "privilege and pleasure" to return to Washington at his own expense and represent the outspoken captain.

He said he is convinced Crommelin is "in the right" and is being victimized by the "top brass" in the Defense Department.

a nation of Islam [a Moslem nation] and proud of it. It might be a good thing if all believers in Islam could gather more closely together and have similar policies."

On safeguards for foreign investors in Iran: "We will let the annual interest on private investments be paid out in foreign currency. Also, if an investment is bought by the government of Iran it will be paid for in the same amount and in the same currency."

On education in Iran: "Every child must have the chance to attend school without any fee or preferment. We also plan special schools for agriculture, engineering and sanitation training. We are only producing 200 doctors a year; we need at least a thousand a year. Our workers are already insured against illness and accidents, and I hope to introduce the same kind of insurance among the peasants."

In his prepared speech the Shah referred to American newspaper stories that called him an "Oriental potentate."

"I do not know just what that term signifies," he said with a smile, "but I suspect it implies rubies and emeralds in a turban topped with an aigrette. Well, ladies and gentlemen, such rubies and emeralds as Iran possesses are locked in a bank vault as part of our national treasure.

"If I had not had to wear a military uniform today, you would have seen me here in a business suit, which is an appropriate costume for one faced with the problems of kingship."

He said Iran was determined to maintain its independence, to live at peace with its neighbors and to develop its resources for the good of its people.

to pay the current moderate governmental charge without help from the Army Relief Societies or the Red Cross," Bliss said.

"The present charge of $1.75 per day is based on the hospital average cost of food and medicine. In the past few years it has risen from 40 cents per day to its present level.

"Any extra financial burden on this presently financially underprivileged group will most certainly have a serious effect and will tend to lower morale at a time when good morale in our armed forces is singularly desirable."

The general contended that from a purely medical standpoint it is essential that the health problems of all persons on an Army post be under supervision of the military medical officers.

By means of such over-all health control, he said, "our soldiers are kept free from disease and this is one of the reasons that we not only have the healthiest army in the world but the healthiest segment of the population" of the country.

Succeeds King

Leahy Heads Historical Foundation

Adm. Leahy

Fleet Adm. William D. Leahy, former presidential chief of staff, was elected president of the Naval Historical Foundation at its 23d annual meeting yesterday at the Army-Navy Club.

Admiral Leahy replaces Fleet Adm. Ernest J. King as head of the private, nonprofit organization formed to obtain Navy historical material.

Eight new trustees were elected: Admiral King, Ferdinand Eberstadt, member of the Hoover Commission; Irving S. Olds, board chairman, U. S. Steel Corp.; Roger Williams, of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., director; Vice Adm. John F. Shafroth, Navy Department general board president, and Capts. Walter Karig, Marion Eppley and Ralph Parker.

Trustees confirmed for an additional term were Commodore Dudley W. Knox, Dr. Samuel Eliot Morison, Col. Jarvis Butler, Capts. Charles Bittinger and J. T. G. Stapler, and Comdr. M. V. Brewington.

squadrons, the entire 35 containing some 480 combat aircraft. The Navy now has about 2250 combat airplanes in addition to service and support craft.

Air stations to be placed on standby status are at Bermuda, Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico; Trinidad, Coco Solo, Panama, and San Juan, Puerto Rico. The air station at Charlestown, R. I., will be closed entirely.

At the same time, the Army announced that Fort McClellan, near Anniston, Ala., would be continued on a standby basis. The fort is now used by National Guard and Organized Reserve units but efforts have recently been made to open it up for Regular forces.

Captive Cold Germ Missing

the MR-1 virus has satisfied the scientists at Bethesda for their purposes of scientific study. They knew they had the technique perfected for isolating cold virus almost at will. They wanted, however, to concentrate on the one they had, less mixed strains confuse the studies.

No matter what virus they next isolate, the scientists can never be sure it's their MR-1, and the sciestific data they've amassed in almost three years is without value except as a procedural guide.

Immunity Hopes Dimmed

Initial experiments to capture the "bug" which periodically besets man began at Bethesda, in January, 1947. Isolation of MR-1 was announced 11 months later.

Last December 31, Drs. Norman H. Topping, Atlas and George A. Hottle, coworkers in the research, reported a chemical test to determine both the presence and potency of the cold virus, permitting more rapid testing of drug action on the virus.

In March, Dr. Atlas made a progress report to the Washington Branch, Society of American Bacteriologists, which dimmed the hopes for cold immunization. The virus, he reported then, regardless of almost endless processing, created no apparent immunity against reinfections.

The virus was first obtained from nasal washings of an unidentified scientist who came down with the classic symptoms of a common cold. The washings were taken from him within 24 hours of his first sneeze.

Prisoners Volunteered

Then the washings were atomized up the nostrils of human volunteers, prisoners at the District's Lorton Reformatory, Lorton, Va. All came down quickly with similar colds.

Then, washings from the prisoners' nostrils were injected into fertile hen eggs. Other prisoners were given nasal sprays from the inoculated eggs. They, too, came down with colds. "Control" prisoners given nasal sprays from untreated eggs were unaffected.

Yesterday, Dr. Atlas said he saw no consolation for his loss in the flood of antihistamine drugs now being sold without prescription. The cure for the common cold, he said, is still as elusive as ever—perhaps more so since the disappearance of his virus.

One on the Aisle—

By Richard L. Coe

THAT VESTAL OF VACUITY, Miss Why-Vonne De Carlo, whose eerie art is to make nothing at all of nothing at all, has a new and strange vehicle at the Capitol, "The Gal Who Took the West." As nearly as I can figure it, this is a spoof on the Westerns, but then with Why-Vonne you never can be sure.

For Why-Vonne is one of the most peculiar of Hollywood phenomena. Although her still photographs suggest a young lady of surpassing beauty, when the pictures begin to move she adds up to rather an angular piece. Technicolor always accompanies Why-Vonne, and this is no exception. While her figure invariably suggests a hint of voluptuousness, there is an undernourished jaggedness about her with which such girls as Rita and Lana are not possessed: this possibly accounts for the fact that never have we seen Why-Vonne as a sweater girl.

Her reading of lines has the effect of a very poor mimic making like Mae West at a choir picnic. She attempts a small scale of spoken notes, which is more than some of our girls do, but she lacks the range of the West.

And the things she is given to say (for one can, on no account, imagine Why-Vonne using words of her own) invariably have a magical quality that makes you think she is about to say something shatteringly wicked which, naturally, she never says. Her sulky eyes flash and she intones, "So you're Grant O'Hara," just when you think she'll come up with something unspeakable.

This peculiar talent, while a small one, has given Why-Vonne a star position with Universal-International who pay her a splendid salary, so they must find her profitable.

As "The Gal Who Took the West," Why-Vonne is entrusted with a sweeping role, which allows her to appear as her vestal self and also as she is when 90. If Lynn Fontanne can get away with it, why not Why-Vonne?

Story by Flashback

A magazine writer is getting the lowdown on Arizona's famed O'Hara family. Through the memories of four people, he retraces the hatred two cousins had for each other and how Why-Vonne managed to marry one of them and keep the O'Hara kingdom from sanguinary uproar.

John Russell and Scott Brady are cousins, grandsons of the old general, Charles Coburn. Charles has ordered an opera singer from New York to open his opera house. Why-Vonne arrives, not looking at all like an opera singer is supposed to look. She sings "Frankie and Johnny" and, in a series of escapades and kidnaping, manages to bring peace to the fightin' O'Haras.

William Bowers and Oscar Brodney, who wrote the screen play, have had their tongues in their cheeks and make good sport of Western tradition. They've got the United States Cavalry near at hand and don't hesitate to use it. The odd thing about this spoof is that so often have Westerns done much the same thing earnestly that Why-Vonne is able to get happily serious about it. So am Eye.

Gracie Barrie on Stage

Gracie Barrie headlines the Capitol stage bill, with a delightfully sophisticated observation about Sunday love. She's changed her style since her early days, but it's a nice new one.

Sam Jack Kaufman and his boys accompany Kay De Witt for her impressive singing of "The Lord's Prayer" and Charlie Edwards' Thanksgiving Week readings.

Fred Roner, the pickpocket maestro, lures victims from the audience, as do the tumbling Maxellos. Patrice Helene and Jan Howard complete the bill with a comedy dance turn.

AL JOLSON'S back in town to receive the Variety Club's "Personality of the Year" award tonight at the Statler from the hands of Defense Undersecretary Early.

CHARLES STARRETT, "The Durango Kid" of Columbia's Westerns, will be on the steps of the Capitol (the Capitol on the Hill, not F st.) this morning as part of the National Kids' Day celebration

"Thankful to Whom?" will be the sermon topic of the Rev. C. Stanley Lowell at 11 a. m. at Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn st. nw.

Other Discourses

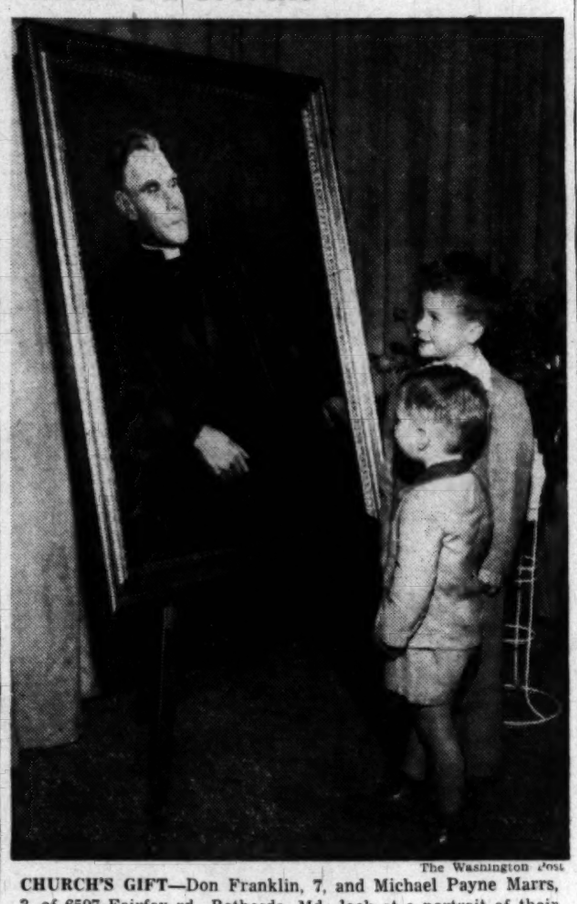
Pastor's Portrait



The Washington Post

CHURCH'S GIFT—Don Franklin, 7, and Michael Payne Marrs, 3, of 6507 Fairfax rd., Bethesda, Md., look at a portrait of their grandfather, the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of the Foundry Methodist Church and chaplain of the Senate. The painting will be presented to the church when it celebrates Dr. Harris' twenty-fifth anniversary as pastor

Members of Foundry Methodist Church on Sunday will complete a week's events marking the 25th anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris.

Last night an oil portrait of Dr. Harris was unveiled, following a pageant about the history of the church. The painting was presented by the Rev. Ralph C. John and accepted for the church by Dr. George B. Woods, chairman of the church board of trustees.

Dr. Harris, who preached his first sermon as pastor of the 135-year-old church on November 16, 1924, has served two terms as chaplain of the United States Senate.

Dr. Arthur S. Flemming, president of Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, will preach at the church at a layman's day service at 11 a. m. Sunday. Dr. Fleming was lay leader of the church and church school superintendent during his years as a member of the United States Civil Service Commission.

Other laymen who will participate in the service will be Dr. D. Stewart Patterson, lay leader of the Baltimore annual conference of the Methodist Church; Dr. Woods, and Norman J. O. Makin, Australian ambassador and member of the Foundary board of stewards.

At 8 p. m. the United States Army Band Chorus will present an hour-long musical service.

Dr. Snyder Honored

The congregation of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut ave. and Everett st. nw., will give a reception from 5 to 7 p. m. Sunday to mark the 20th anniversary of the pastorate of Dr. Henry W. Snyder and his 40th anniversary in the ministry.

Mission Topic At Cathedral Is Marriage

Christian marriage will be discussed by the Rev. Bryan Green of Birmingham, England, at 8 p. m. today at the Washington Cathedral.

The service is the seventh in a series of nine being conducted by the English clergyman at the cathedral as part of a mission sponsored by the Episcopal Diocese of Washington.

The eighth mission service will be at 8 p. m. Sunday, and on Monday at 8 p. m. a service of thanksgiving in gratitude for the success of the mission will be given. For half an hour before each service, the congregation will be led in community singing.

Attendance Averages 3000

Nightly attendance at the mission services, which have been described as a "rousing success" by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, has averaged 3000 persons. During the services young people have clustered around the lectern from which the missioner speaks and have perched on the steps of the great choir and on the carved pulpit.

At noonday services Monday through Thursday at the Church of the Epiphany, 1317 G st. nw., Mr. Green was heard by about 1700 persons each day. The services were sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches.

Speaking of the mission, Bishop Dun declared that "only God knows what people have brought and what they have taken away, but judging by their faces, many have come as true seekers and many have begun to find a new or renewed faith."

Only Years Can Tell

"Only the months and years ahead can disclose the real results" of the mission, he said, adding that "what I hope and pray for that part of the church for which I have a special responsibility is that the mission may mark a turning to the attack."

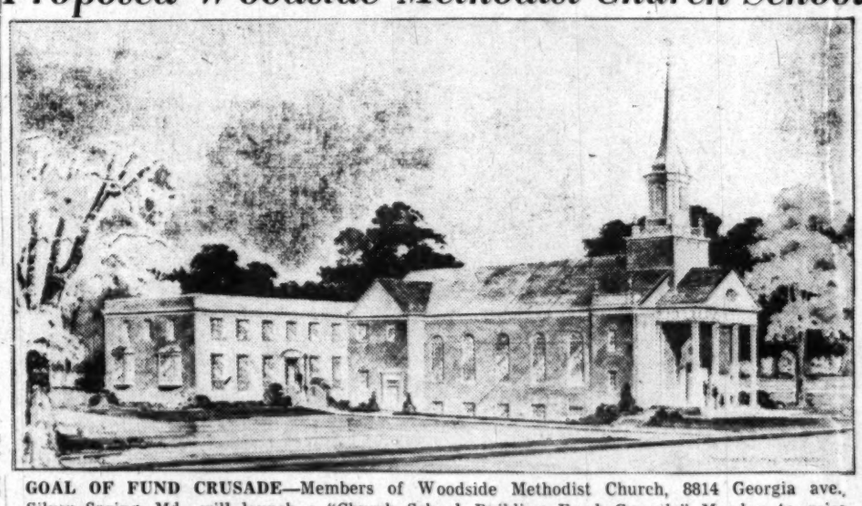
He urged that "all of us who have been moved by this mission catch and hold the militant mood which Bryan Green has helped us to find."

Dr. Quay Will Preach At Washington Heights

The Rev. Dr. James K. Quay, vice president of Princeton Theological Seminary, Princeton, N. J., will preach at 11 a. m. Sunday at Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, Kalorama and Columbia rds. nw.

Dr. Quay, who served for 29 years as a Presbyterian missionary and Young Men's Christian Association World Service man in Cairo, Egypt, became vice president of Princeton Seminary on January 1, 1948.

Proposed Woodside Methodist Church School



GOAL OF FUND CRUSADE—Members of Woodside Methodist Church, 8814 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., will launch a "Church School Building Fund Crusade" Monday to raise $70,000 for the erection of a new educational building. The new building (on the left) will be erected in the rear of the present sanctuary (on the right). It will replace a frame chapel and Sunday school building, currently used for men's and children's classes, which was built in 1897

Church Groups Set Clothing Collections

Clothing collections have been scheduled for the week of November 20 through 27 by both the Roman Catholics and the Lutheran World Relief.

In the Washington area, the Lutheran drive will be headed by the Rev. Donald F. Bautz, director of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society.

The Lutherans are asking for used clothing, bedding and shoes, especially those suitable for winter use. The clothing, to be deposited at Lutheran churches, will be taken to Easton, Md., for shipment to refuges in Germany and the Near East.

The Catholic drive, under the national direction of War Relief Services—National Catholic Welfare Conference, will be headed locally by the Rev. E. Jerome Winter, pastor of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, 16th st. and Park rd. nw.

Father Winter has headed the Washington drive for overseas relief for the past 12 years.

Both clothing and soap will be collected by Catholic churches in Greater Washington, which will be open day and evening for contributions. The collection is the first of its kind held in Washington in three years.

Eldbrooke Congregation To Hear 'Holy City'

The sanctuary choir of Eldbrooke Methodist Church, River rd. and Wisconsin ave. nw., will present the oratorio, "The Holy City" by A. R. Gaul, at 8 p. m. Sunday.

Leading the choir will be Robert Landers, who also is director of the Air Force Singing Sergeants. The Rev. F. Paul Harris, pastor, will give a brief meditation on "The Significance of Religious Music."

Silver Spring Church Starts Building Fund Drive Monday

Members of Woodside Methodist Church, 8814 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md., will launch a "Church School Building Fund Crusade" Monday.

The Rev. Albert S. Adams of the department of finance of the Methodist Board of Missions and Church Extension in Philadelphia will direct the crusade. It will get under way after a "kick-off" dinner Monday at 6:30 p. m. at the church.

Goal of the drive is $70,000, which will be used to build a new three-story educational building and to remodel the present structure, which was erected in 1925.

The new building will be built in the rear of the present sanctuary, and eventually will replace a frame chapel and Sunday school building, which have been in use since 1897. They are currently being used for a men's class and three children's Sunday school classes.

Plans call for modernization of rooms and equipment for every age group in the Sunday school. Addition of the new building will more than triple the space now in use in the frame chapel and educational building.

The present church sanctuary was erected in 1939. Minister is the Rev. Philip C. Edwards, who has held the pastorate for the past five years.

Horton to Speak In Christ Church Dedication Series

Dr. Douglas Horton, minister of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches, will preach at 11 a. m. Sunday at Christ Congregational Church, 9525 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, Md.

Dr. Horton

The service is the fourth in a series marking the dedication of the Silver Spring church. Dr. Horton, who is also moderator of the International Congregational Council, will speak on "The World and Christ Congregational Church."

The Rev. Philip C. Edwards, pastor of Woodside Methodist Church and president of the Silver Spring Council of Churches, will speak at a community service at the church at 8 p. m. Sunday.

Grace Church Sets Dedication Rites

More than $20,000 worth of improvements at Grace Reformed Church, 15th and O sts. nw., will be dedicated at 11 a. m. Sunday.

The Rev. Robert W. Olewiler, pastor of the church since April, 1948, will preside at the dedicatory service. The speaker will be the Rev. Dr. Frederick K. Stamm, radio preacher, writer, and pastor of First Congregational Church, Chicago, Ill.

During recent months the entire exterior of the 43-year-old church building has been cleaned by sand blasters, the sanctuary has been redecorated, and new choir stalls and new lighting equipment installed in the sanctuary.

New altar furnishings have been added; the church kitchen has been completely modernized, and the church school building repainted.

During his term as President, Theodore Roosevelt attended Grace Church regularly. In recognition of this, one room has been remodeled as a Roosevelt Memorial.

On one wall of the room hangs a portrait of the former President which he gave to the church at the close of his Administration. A display case contains the Hymnal and Order of Worship used by the Roosevelt family, the gavel he used in laying the cornerstone of the present building, and a copy of the speech he delivered at the dedication.

The present German Gothic building, designed by the man who designed the Library of Congress, was erected in 1903. It succeeded a building erected in 1881, four years after the church was organized.

Inside Yugoslavia

Workers Get Results, But Lose Liberty

By Frank Gervasi
Staff Correspondent
(Second of three daily articles)

Belgrade, Nov. 18.—The Communist government surrounds the Yugoslav worker with all the familiar benefits of the so-called welfare state. But it also effectively wraps him up in political barbed wire.

It is one of the major inconsistencies of the Communist or totalitarian socialist system of government that the very person who it is supposed to liberate — the worker — actually becomes its prisoner. The state becomes the exploiter.

The Yugoslav worker enjoys sickness and old age pensions, family allowances, paid vacations, medical and dental care and a guaranteed job. But he pays dearly for those advantages, in the coin of personal freedom.

As a citizen, he is practically disenfranchised, for he may vote only for the candidates on a single party list at election time. As a worker, he is, at least at the present stage of Communist development, an instrument of the state for increasing production, an economic gear in an industrial machine, with no more civil rights than he has as a citizen.

Yugoslav leaders deny this. Lazar Stefanovitch, a top executive of the United Labor Unions of Yugoslavia, or JSJ, stoutly maintained in an interview that "the workers and the technologic intelligentsia are in power."

Yugoslav workers do appear to have slightly more say in government than their counterparts in the Soviet Union. Members of the JSJ directorate sit on the Planning Commission and assist in setting up production targets and work schedules and in determining wage and price levels.

But who elects the JSJ delegates on the Planning Commission? They are chosen by the party. The elections are cut and dried.

The JSJ does take an active part in factory management. It may advise on all matters concerning factory operaton and if a manager ignores or rejects the advice of the JSJ representatives, he invariably gets into trouble. Conversely a manager may issue orders, but they are not effective until the JSJ and/or the party approves them. The JSJ, in other words, is the active arm of the party in the labor field.

It may be argued, of course—and it is—that the party is the people and that, therefore, the interests of the workers are thus always paramount. But this is as specious an argument as the one that membership in the JSJ is "voluntary." There is no other union.

The power of the JSJ to hire and fire, place or displace, reward or punish workers is absolute. A worker, theoretically, need not belong to the JSJ to get a job.

As a result of actual or implied social and political pressures, all skilled and unskilled workers, about 1,300,000, belong to the JSJ. The JSJ also contains approximately 300,000 white-collar workers of all kinds, from civil servants to college professors and opera singers. Its membership increases gradually as more and more peasants, freed by increased mechanization, come off the farms to take jobs in the factories or on public works projects.

The strike, labor's main weapon for forcing wage increases and obtaining improvements in working conditions, is not illegal. It simply is never used. Yugoslav workers wisely refuse to run the risk of having a strike considered as sabotage. That is a crime against the state.

The usual answer to questions about why Yugoslavia has no strikes is that the workers have no reason to strike. "They own all of the means of production," Stefanovitch explained, "and if they struck, they would be merely striking against themselves. A man does not throw rocks at his own windows, does he?"

The idea that they are the power in the land and that while, at the moment, they are enduring hardships they are building a bright tomorrow of freedom and abundance is dinned into the ears of the workers constantly.

Kids get their Marx with their ABC's in the schools. High school boys and girls learn their Lenin with their math. And in the universities, Marx is mingled with materia medica.

As long as communism can generate and maintain the workers' faith in their future, there seems no reason to believe or to hope—as many do—that it will fail. History shows that police states do not collapse of their own oppressions, inequities or real or imagined inefficiencies. They fall only when they start wars.

Aberdeen Pastor Accepts Call To New York Avenue Church

The Rev. George McPherson Docherty, Presbyterian pastor of North Church, Aberdeen, Scotland, has accepted a call to the New York Avenue Presbyterin Church and will take up his duties about March 1.

Announcement of Mr. Docherty's acceptance was made yesterday by George E. Worthington, member of a committee handling the matter..

Worthington quoted Mr. Docherty as saying in his letter of acceptance "I shall be honored to accept the call—my only hope is that you will realize that I am not nearly such 'a wonderful guy' as might seem to be assumed if I am to take really seriously some of the adjectives and general prose of so many very kind letters . . ."

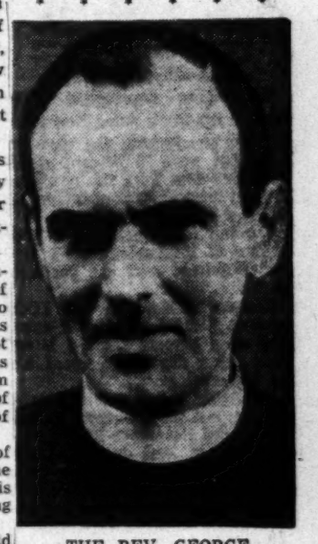
He said Mr. Docherty spoke of some unfinished work to be done at his present post and gave this as the reason for his not wishing to come here earlier than March.

Nomination of the 37-year-old Scottish cleric had met some opposition within the local congregation mainly because he had allegedly voted for Socialist candidates in Scotland.

The decision to call Mr. Docherty was voted 512-142 earlier this month. A second vote made the decision virtually unanimous.

According to Worthington, Mr. Docherty had been highly praised by the dean of faculty of divinity at the University of Glasgow.

Mr. Docherty will succeed the late Dr. Peter Marshall in the pulpit. He has been voted an $8000 yearly salary, a manse and a six-week annual vacation.



THE REV. GEORGE McPHERSON DOCHERTY

Guest speaker at 11 a. m. at the Andrew Rankin Memorial Chapel, Howard University, will be Dr. Channing H. Tobias, director of the Phelps-Stokes Fund, New York.

Store Sales Steady Here During Week

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales in the week ended November 12 held steady with the year-ago level, but were 15 percent ahead of the previous week this year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

For the four weeks ended November 12, local sales were 1 percent improved over the year-ago mark.

Regionally, stores in the Fifth Reserve District reported a sales drop of 4 percent for the latest week and a dip of 3 percent for the four-week period.

Nationally, department store sales were down 9 percent for the week ended November 12.

In view of the decline shown elsewhere, local merchants were of the opinion that the steady trend here in sales is encouraging. Pre-Christmas promotions have already started boosting dollar volume and cooler weather also was seen as a boon.

NEW COMPTROLLER: Directors of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday elected Harold J. Althouse as comptroller to fill the vacancy left by the recent death of C. J. Riggall. Althouse previously was assistant to the comptroller. He has been associated with Peoples Drug since 1928, being in charge of the York, Pa., office from 1928 to 1931, when he came to Washington to serve as supervisor of the bookkeeping department. He was made assistant to the comptroller in 1944. A native of Glen Rock, Pa., he now lives in Chevy Chase, Md.

NEW MANAGER: Appointment of G. G. Boone as manager of the Hotel 2400 was announced yesterday by Charles L. Hutchinson, general manager of the hotel. Boone previously was manager of the Burlington Hotel for the past four years. He was also formerly associated with the Broadmoor, Fairfax and Raleigh Hotels here. He is a member of the Hotel Association of Washington and is now serving his second year as president of Charter 31, Hotel Greeters of America.

Virginia Electric & Power Co. voted regular quarterly of 30 cents a common share payable December 20 to stock of record November 30.

Wilson Wins, 20-6, Plays in Championship Game

GW Out to Upset Hoyas Today

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

There's nothing unusual about a George Washington U.-Georgetown football game promising to be highly interesting. You have to go back 27 years to find one that wasn't.

By all odds, though, today's 19th renewal of a fine traditional rivalry is bound to be the most exciting.

If 20,000 don't flock to Griffith Stadium for the 2 p. m. kickoff, Washington football fandom is sadly lacking in imagination.

What figured to be a bitterly contested battle, anyway, received an unexpected shot in the arm when Georgetown accepted a bid to El Paso's Sun Bowl Thursday.

Win, lose or draw, the Hoyas travel to Texas for their January 2 engagement with the Border Conference champion, probably Texas Tech.

George Washington, with only three victories in eight starts, vows it will take the edge off Georgetown's bowl appearance. Naturally, the Hoyas are on the spot. To maintain their football prestige, they'll have to win to take a 6-3 season mark to Texas with them.

Spectator interest will be high and so will interest in one spectator. His Majesty, the Shah of Iran, will be a guest of GW and the Colonials are making the permanent king honorary captain for a day.

All in all, the game has more angles than a con man. For the first time in the long series, Georgetown has a defeat to avenge. Last year, GW won its first after numerous heartbreaking efforts, 13-7.

G. W. worked up to it by gaining a scoreless tie in 1947. The Colonials always have a habit of getting worked up for Georgetown. The Hoyas' great 1940 team that lost only to Boston College, 19-18, in one of the best games in American football history had all it could do the next week to beat a supposedly weak GW team, 8-0.

It's interesting to note that the 1940 team went to the Orange Bowl.

Hoyas Rated Favorites

The head coaching situation is worth mention. GW's Bo Rowland, pushing 50, matches wits for the first time with Bob Margarita, 29-year-old T-formation addict who's making his debut a smashing success.

Last year, it was Arkadelphia, Ark., Bo who had the town talking. Rowland, a single wing advocate, beat Virginia, then Georgetown for the first time in GW's history.

Professional odds-makers quote Georgetown a 14-point favorite, but Washingtonians who know better feel that the game's a tossup. Rowland's team is better than its won-lost record indicates.

Only Maryland and Duke have won handily and the Terps' 26-point margin is exactly the same it held over Georgetown. GW played Virginia and Kansas on fairly even terms and those games could have gone its way.

Handsome Andy Davis isn't the statistical whiz he was as a freshman last season when he played the leading role against Georgetown. He's still Handy Andy, though, and he can make his presence felt on defense as well as offense.

DuGoff, Jones, GW Threats

Fleet Al DuGoff and Charlie Jones may exploit the Hoyas' weakness against speed. Against VPI, DuGoff sprinted 105 yards for a touchdown on a kickoff return and went 80 yards from scrimmage to beat Lafayette. Jones, only a soph, scored on a 94-yard pass play against Virginia. Blocker Stan Burak helps shake them loose.

The Colonial line was good enough to play Maryland's burly forward wall fairly evenly, gaining 122 yards and yielding 167. Standouts include Ends Frank Close and Charlie Butler; Tackles Harvey Shipman and Clarence Drayer; Guards Charley Gunner and George Walley and Backersup Johnny Grinnell and Bill Shaw.

Georgetown's been a spirited club all year. It rose to great heights to beat superior Boston College and Wake Forest teams.

Billy Conn, one of the cleverest runners in these parts, supplies most of the ground punch. Against Denver last week, Jack Kivus, a defensive star, showed that he can carry the ball.

He smartly went for two touchdowns on runs of 33 and 8 yards. Soph Don Kitkowski, used principally on defense, also is moving well.

GW's weakness is supposed to be pass defense and that means Quarterback Frank Mattingly, a soph with a brilliant future, should play a key role. He's seventeenth leading passer in the country and if a score or more of his tosses hadn't been dropped, he would be well above the .500 mark in completions.

Today's game couldn't have had a better build-up. The players now can start knocking each other down.

30,700 Will See Virginia Play Tulane

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 18.—This community, caught up in a football fever unmatched hitherto, is eagerly waiting on tomorrow's Virginia-Tulane game—and so are the talent scouts from three Bowl game communities.

Scott Stadium, swollen to 30,700 seats by temporary additions, will house its biggest crowd in history when unbeaten Virginia moves against the mastodonic, once-beaten Tulane team.

The probable line-ups:

Tulane		Virginia
Sheffield	L.E.	Elliott
Druen	L.T.	Schulte
Franz	L.G.	Thomas
Kotsemann	Center	Myers
Doyle	R.G.	Wright
Regas	R.T.	Jones
Partridge	R.E.	Weir
Ernst	Q.B.	LeSane
Jones	L.H.	Osisek
Svoboda	R.H.	Sheaf
Price	F.B.	Papit

Kickoff—2 p. m. (EST).

Coach Art Guepe's Virginia lads, basking in their new role of giant killers since bowling over Penn two weeks back, will be moving against Tulane as a 12-point underdog, however.

Virginia will be battling not only to preserve its unbeaten record but to impress the committeemen from the Sugar, Orange and 'Gator Bowls who are on the scene with invitations poised. Tulane is similarly Bowl-minded. Definite Bowl bids would wait on Virginia's game with Carolina, and Tulane's with Louisiana State the following week.

Papit vs. Price

Two names penetrate the pregame din. John Papit and Ed Price. Papit is Virginia's high-powered ball-carrying ace, with Price his opposite number in the Tulane backfield. Both rank high among the Nation's leading ground gainers.

Ever since the Penn game, Guepe has been alerting his Cavaliers to check the marauding of the powerful Price, who has been averaging 6.5 yards all season off the T-formation of Coach Henry Frnka. "Price runs inside and outside, and he's the fastest starting back in college football," Guepe said with a trace of a moan.

Papit, who has shouldered the Brunt of Virginia's running game all season and is bidding for all-America honors, has averaged 6.2 yards per try. The threat of his running set up Virginia's slick passing game that defeated Penn by two touchdowns. Like Price, he is a rapid 190-pounder.

Guepe announced today that Whitey Michels, his passing-running-kicking senior back, would not start the game, but he added significantly "we'll use him if we need him, and I'd say we'll need him plenty."

Michels is still handicapped by a shoulder separation on the left side suffered against Penn, but he has been working out almost all week. His replacement at the out-

Post Writers Hit Area's Two Big Games Today

Once again The Washington Post brings its readers full-scale reportorial and photographic coverage of the area's two big football attractions today, the Tulane-Virginia game at Charlottesville and the George Washington-Georgetown clash at Griffith Stadium.

Each event will be double-teamed with two reporters and two photographers assigned to the respective attractions.

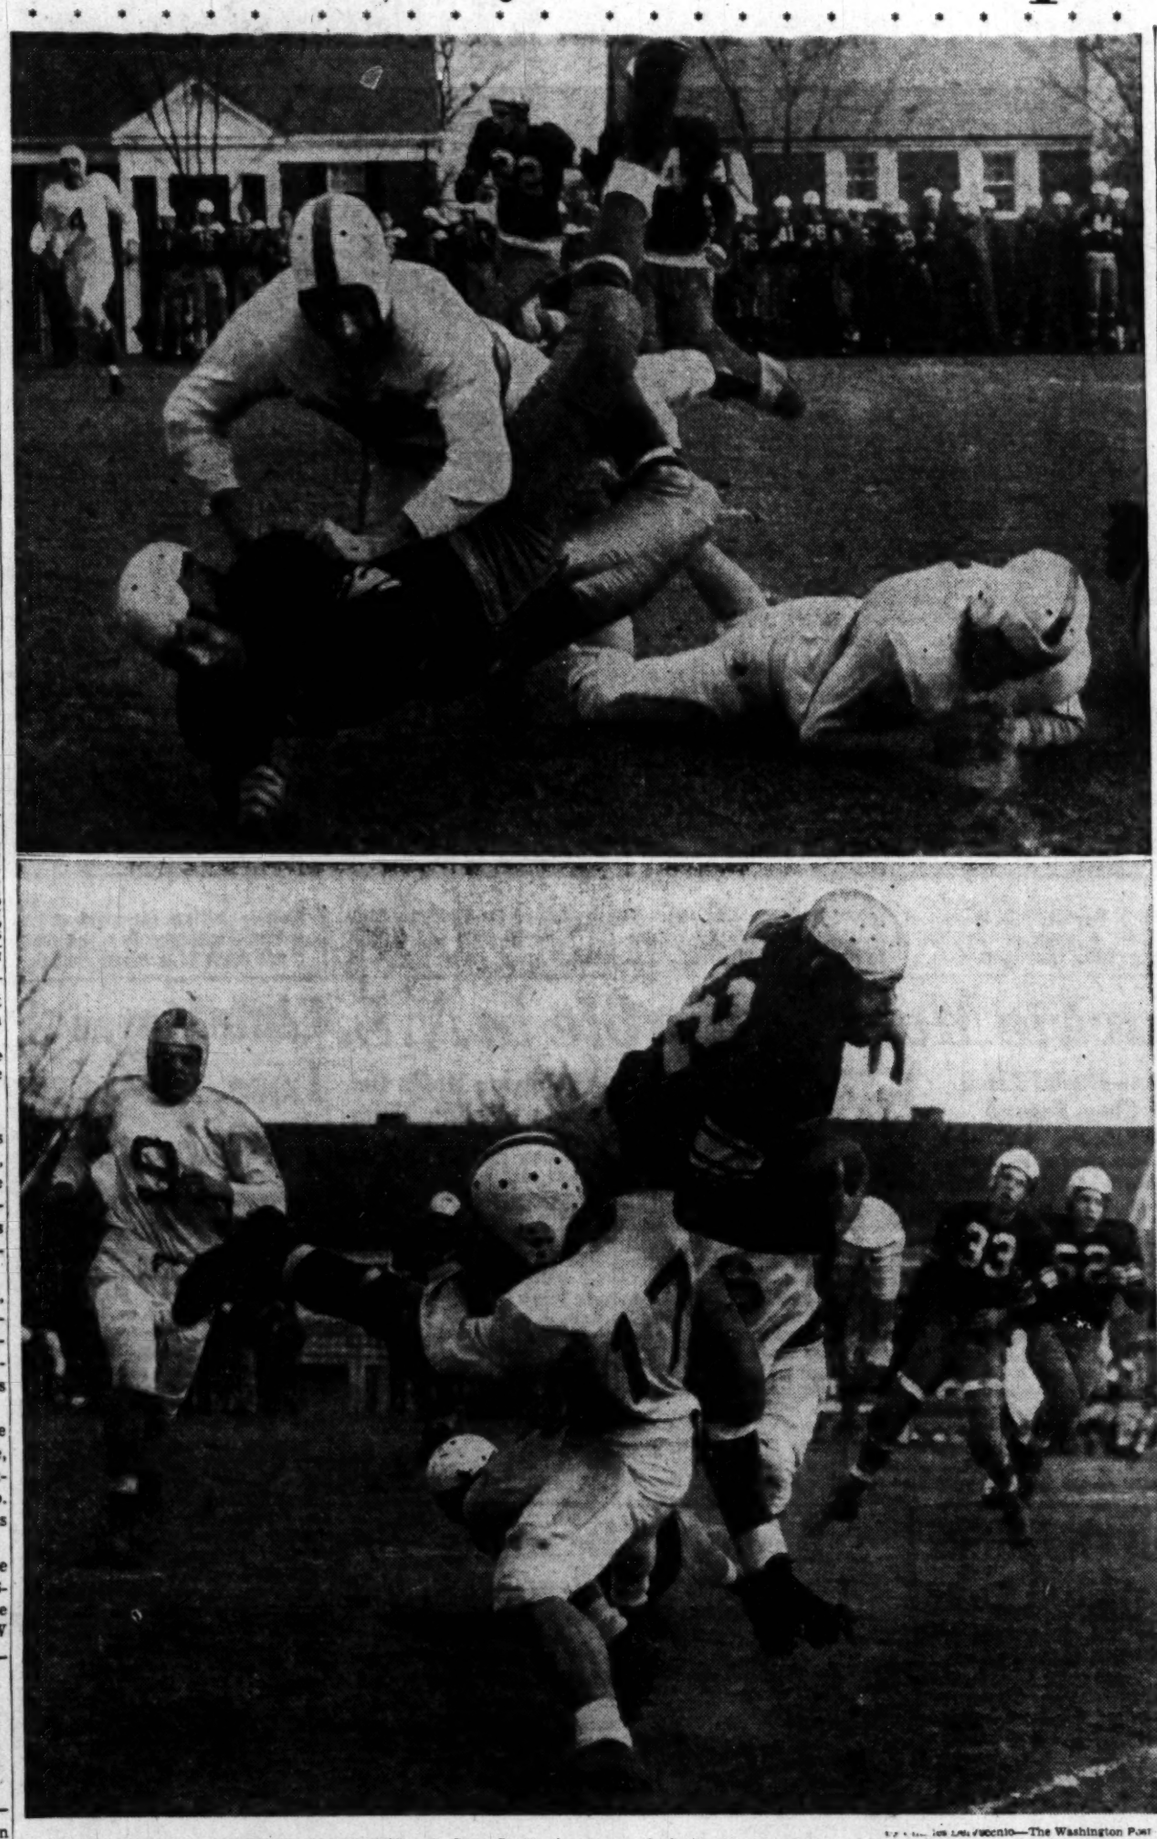
Tulane-Virginia: Shirley Povich and Morris Siegel.

George Washington-Georgetown: Jack Walsh and Herb Heft.

Plus full-page pictures of both games.

On the high school front, McKinley Tech meets Central at Central to determine which will oppose Wilson for the Interhigh championship at Griffith Stadium November 25. Reporter West McLean will be on hand for the high school clash, along with photographers.

To date, reporters of The Washington Post have covered 49 DIFFERENT college teams this year, including four of the five major unbeaten, untied teams.



SPILLING ACTION IN HIGH GAME—Wilson's Don Scott (in top picture) is brought down by Melvin Cook (18) and Douglas Pearson of Chamberlain after a long run in yesterday's Interhigh game. Lower picture, Carl Prigg of Wilson rips off 10 yards before he is given a ride by Mickey Curtis of Chamberlain. Coming up at left is Chamberlain's Tommy Blount (9). Looking on at right are Wilson's Ray Davis (33) and Mitchell Deoudes (52). Wilson won, 20-6

Wilson's Green Tigers recovered from a first period scare to down a fighting Chamberlain squad, 20-6, yesterday at Wilson.

Wilson won the Southern division of the Interhigh League and the right to meet the winner of today's McKinley Tech-Central game in the Interhigh championship game, sponsored by The Washington Post and the Board of Education, next Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

Chamberlain threw a scare into the Green Tigers by taking the opening kickoff and going 74 yards in five plays to grab a 6-0 lead.

Mickey Curtis picked up seven yards on the first play, Jim Rollins added two and Curtis made it a first down on the Volts 38.

Buddy Horrell missed on his first pass but heaved one to Mickey Curtis on the Wilson 35, and Curtis raced the last 35 yards down the sideline to score. Jim Hall blocked Tom Wall's attempted conversion.

The Green Tigers bounced back, scoring on the second play of the second period with Leo Speros bucking over from the 3 to climax a 66-yard drive.

Carl Prigg and Speros sparked the march, Prigg averaging 6.5 yards per rush in five plays while Speros accounted for 5.6 yards per try in five rushes. Garry Quinn picked up 5 yards in two tries to complete the march. Tommy Sandoz added the extra point to put Wilson ahead to stay.

Wilson added another touchdown shortly after the next kickoff. The Tigers held on Chamberlain's 43 and forced the Volts to punt, to the Wilson 27. Tommy Sandoz returned it to the Wilson 41. Carl Prigg lost 2 yards and then Leo Speros smashed over right tackle, reversed his field and scampered down the sidelines 61 yards for the tally. Tommy Sandoz's attempted conversion was wide.

George Warring scored the final Wilson touchdown in the third period climaxing a 32-yard march after Preston Kavanaugh intercepted Buddy Horrell's pass on the Chamberlain 32.

Prigg picked up 3 yards, Warring got 6 and Sandoz made it a first down on the 21. Speros swept left end for 11 yards, smaked center for 5 and Warring carried it to the 2 from where he plunged over on the next play. Sandoz's extra point try was good.

Buddy Horrell and Mickey Curtis connected on another long pass play midway in the fourth period but couldn't cross the final line. Horrell passed from his own 23 to Curtis on the 40 and Curtis raced to the Wilson 18 before being brought down. Bob Wood gained a yard and Curtis picked up 7 but two Wood passes fell incomplete and Wilson took over on downs to end the threat.

Central, Tech Play For Crown

McKinley Tech and Central, bitter Interhigh football rivals since 1902, fight it out for big stakes today at 2 p. m. in Central's stadium.

To the winner goes the Northern Division title and the right to play Wilson for the city-wide Interhigh championship the night of November 25 at Griffith Stadium.

Central and Tech have identical league records, four wins, no losses and one tie. Central, with a slightly tougher schedule, has averaged 24 points per game. Tech has averaged more than 30.

Central is undefeated in 15 straight games, its last loss having been inflicted by Tech, 14-7, in the 1947 championship game. Central won the title last year.

Regulars back from last year's championship team are End Franny Gleason, Halfback Terry Gregory, Center Bill Weaver and Guards Lew Glickfield and Dick Wooten. Gregory and Quarterback Jimmy Sullivan, both lefthanders, share the passing assignments.

Central, under a new coach, Lou Chacos, is using the T-formation this season in contrast to the Notre Dame box of last season.

Tech's single wing is powered by Tailback Sugar Ray Fox, a lean running and passing star, who was a reserve end last year. His favorite air targets are Ends Elwood Cooke and Ritchie Gaskell Charlie Greene, a fleet 178-pound guard, leads the hard-charging line.

In their series, Central holds a 21-20 edge over Tech, seven games having resulted in ties.

Seattle Wants Help From Nats

Seattle, Nov. 18 (AP).—General Manager Earl Sheely of the Seattle Rainiers, freshly deprived of his ace catcher, complained today that the Pacific Coast League draft price of $10,000 is "much too low."

The Washington Nationals chose backstop Mickey Grasso in the draft.

"Apparently $10,000 doesn't mean a thing," said Sheely. "Three of the pitchers drafted out of our league—Steve Nagy of San Francisco, Milo Candini of Oakland and Mal Mallette of Sacramento—all had sore arms last year."

Sheely said he would ask Washington for aid in the catching department. "They ought to help us," he said. "They took our No. 1 catcher."

Miami Beats Florida, 28-13

Miami, Fla., Nov. 18 (AP).—The University of Miami Hurricanes defeated the University of Florida Gators, 28 to 13, tonight in the Orange Bowl, before a record regular season crowd of 55,981.

All scoring came in the final half of the bone-crushing battle. The Hurricanes struck first in the third period and scored twice within three minutes.

Caps Take On Chicago Stags At Uline's Arena Tonight

The Caps say they're strengthened for tonight's Uline Arena encounter with the Chicago Stags. They'll have to be.

Chicago hits town with a 7-3 record, having lost last night to the Philadelphia Warriors. The loss snapped a six-game winning streak. One of those six was a 77-63 decision over the Caps.

In that, one, Washington was without the services of Coach Bob Feerick, Bones McKinney and Freddie Scolari. The trio will see some action tonight.

Feerick has a trick of playing five minutes or so then resting. It's helping the knee that was operated on last summer. Against Denver, Bob showed he still has that marvelous one-hand shot and passing ability. He wound up with a dozen points.

Big Jack Nichols, leading Cap scorer with 141 points, got 31 against the Stags in Madison Square Garden.

Stags' leader is Max Zaslofsky, one of the great BAA players. Stephanz, Dick O'Keefe and Chick Reiser will see what they can do about restraining his 16-point average. O'Keefe did an excellent job against Philadelphia's Joe Fulks the other night, holding him scoreless for nearly three periods and grabbing 12 himself.

Kleggie Hermsen, traded right before the season opened, will oppose his old Cap teammates. He may be playing against Chuck Gilmur, the man sent by the Stags for Hermsen.

Duke's Mounie Won't Play Today

Durham, N. C., Nov. 18 (AP).—Jack Mounie, Duke University's star fullback from Portsmouth, Va., has been declared out of tomorrow's game with the University of North Carolina in Duke Stadium because of a back injury suffered in last week's George Washington game.

He will be replaced by Paul Stephanz,

Bell Already Has Sold Its Highs Title Game Tickets

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

BELL VOCATIONAL SCHOOL, last in the Interhigh League race, yesterday was the first to sell out its block of adult tickets to the big November 25 championship football game at Griffith Stadium.

Lester C. Walter, principal at Bell, reported that in one day his school sold as many adult tickets as there students enrolled there. Any what's more, 75 percent of the students have already bought their tickets.

The Northern Washington Lions Club, headed by Ted McGann, bought a large number of tickets from Bell, and the Lions members also set up posters in the show windows of their stores.

"This is Bell's first season of Interhigh competition, and although we didn't win a game, we want everybody to know that we're big league," said Walter yesterday. "We haven't finished the job yet. We want more tickets Monday."

Bell will share the proceeds of the title game with nine other Interhigh Schools, the money to be spent on the purchase of athletic equipment.

Wilson's 20-6 victory over Chamberlain, which qualified the Tigers for the championship game, fired new community enthusiasm in the Cleveland Park section of the city.

William Solomon, a member of the Home and School Association, received permission to water color window-length advertisements on the stores of two merchants.

By nightfall, the huge paintings were completed at General Electronics Store, 4513 Wisconsin ave. nw., and Julian Behrend Haberdashery, 5021 Connecticut ave. nw. Both stores also purchased blocks of tickets for the title classic.

Farrington Wants D. C. to Go Collegiate

Decrying the lack of interest in today's George Washington-Georgetown game, Max Farrington, GW director of athletics, last night said "down with the pros, let's get behind college athletics in Washington."

Farrington made his remarks at the Georgetown "G" club's annual pre-GW game dinner at the Hotel Washington.

"There are 5000 Georgetown alumni in this area and 30,000 George Washington alumni," he said. "It's high time that organizations such as this and such as ours get behind our alumni. After all, it's as much your team as it is ours."

Farrington said he had been attending Redskins games for years "and I enjoy them, but we have two fine teams at George Washington and Georgetown and we need your support. This has been a pro town too long."

Today's annual intra-city scrap at Griffith Stadium is expected to attract only about 15,000, some 21,000 below the stadium's capacity.

"This is a great rivalry," Farrington continued, "and deserves better support. It should be a sellout."

Other speakers on the program were Jack Hagerty, G. U.'s athletic director who echoed Farrington's sentiments about the lack of interest for college sports in Washington; and Coaches Bo Rowland, of George Washington, and Bob Margarita, of Georgetown.

Unbeaten GW Freshmen Whip Hoyas, 9 to 0, for Fourth Straight

Baumgartner And Barriera Lead Attack

George Washington Frosh, one of the best yearling clubs in the school's history, defeated stubborn Georgetown Frosh, 9-0, on the Hilltop yesterday.

Yesterday's victory, coupled with the 18-13 defeat of the Maryland Frosh last week, made the Junior Colonials the District freshmen champions in the G. W.-Georgetown-Maryland rivalry.

In winning its fourth in a row, undefeated GW scored all its points in the second period. George Semkew went over from the 1 after a 55-yard march engineered mainly on runs by Bino Barriera and Jack Baumgartner, former McKinley Tech ace.

Barrie, flashy 150-pound runner, converted from placement. When Georgetown's Al Crowley tried to punt from his end zone, End Frank Rizzuto and Guard Bob Allwine blocked it for the safety.

The Hoya freshman surged back in the second half and a 40-yard advance led by Dino Pagluica and Dick Doyle reached the GW 10 before the Colonials hurled them back.

Pagluica also went on a 20-yard sprint in the third period.

After the game, Coach Ray Hanken acclaimed his team "the greatest George Washington University freshman football team in history."

GW closes out its season Thanksgiving morning against Navy's "B" team. It has won over Bullis, 13-0; Fort Myer, 36-6; Maryland Frosh, 19-13.

Georgetown Frosh closed out its season yesterday and, despite the defeat, it was a winning one for Coach George Murtagh. His boys beat Temple Frosh, 18-6; Bullis, 39-13; Fort Myer, 18-6, and Longwood, 14-0. They lost to Maryland Frosh, 19-0, and William and Mary Frosh, 19-0.

Warriors Sock Stags

Philadelphia, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Philadelphia Warriors snapped the six-game winning streak of the Chicago Stags, 103-88, before 4500 tonight.

After the lead had changed hands eight times in as many minutes, Philadelphia took a lead which they never delinquished, although the Stags twice trimmed it to three points in the closing stages.

Floor records were set for the game's personal fouls, 78, and fouls against one team, 44 against Chicago.

Jackie Most Valuable in N.L.

Stan Musial Rated A Close Second

New York, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Jackie Robinson's slashing bat and flashing feet carried him to the National League's most valuable player award today, but the voting was just as close as the pennant race between the Cards and the Dodgers.

Jackie, the Dodger second baseman who won the league batting and base-stealing championships, won the award with a total of 264 votes out of a possible 336.

But the 24 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America who did the balloting made St. Louis' Stan Musial a fairly close second with 226 votes. Country Slaughter of the Cards was third in the voting with 181 votes.

For Robinson the award climaxed his greatest season, his third in the majors. The most famous Negro player of modern times, the first member of his race to play as such in the majors, he won the league batting title with a mark of .342 after leading almost all season, and he led the league in stolen bases with 36. His batting mark was one point lower than the American League champ, George Kell of Detroit, and his base-stealing figure was the highest in either league.

Long regarded as an outstanding fielder, Robinson also made new headlines with his bat, finishing second in hits with 203, second in runs batted in with 124, second in doubles with 38, second in triples with 12, third in runs scored with 122, and he also hit 16 home runs.

Bell Outpoints Charlie Titone

Bobby Bell, Youngstown, Ohio featherweight, punched his way to a 10-round split decision over Brooklyn's Charlie Titone last night before crowd of 522, the smallest ever to see a fight at Uline Arena.

Judge Charlie Reynolds voted for Titone while Referee Marty Gallagher and Judge Robert Kilmartin cast their ballots for Bell.

Bobby, with a flurry of rights, shook up Titone in the fifth and ninth rounds but Charlie bounced right back in the sixth and tenth to score his best rounds. There were no knockdowns.

Bell, avenging a close loss to the Brooklyn lad in New York three months ago, ran up a lead in the early rounds and held off Titone's late fight rally.

The gross gate was $1064 and net was $771 for the Liberty A. C's. second indoor show of the season.

In the first of five four-round preliminaries, between local boxers, George Carrigan decisioned George Sherrod. Jimmy O'Brien scored a three-round technical knockout over Charley Duke, Angelo Mariho defeated John Pratt, and Kid Wolfe easily outpointed Joe Flood in three bouts made up of Baltimoreans.

Charlie Bennett won over Chink Williams in the final four-rounder

De Matha Wins Over NTS, 7-2

By Howard Flieger, Jr.

Halfback Chick Richardson nearly lost the game for DeMatha, but instead he won it, 7-2, scoring DeMatha's lone touchdown against National Training School yesterday on the losers' field.

Richardson was trapped in the end zone and tackled by Don Baker, who got credit for the safety that put N.T.S. in the lead in the first quarter.

In the third period Richardson saved the day for DeMatha as he intercepted a pass by George Laroque and raced 73 yards to score. John Schinholtser added the conversion and DeMatha went ahead to stay 7-2.

National Training School tried to strengthen its lead in the second quarter as Laroque carried his team to the DeMatha seven. But penalties killed the drive as the Saints took over on their own 28. During the second half N.T.S. was unable to penetrate any further than DeMatha's 27.

Late in the first quarter, Gonzaga Center Tommy Kolb blocked Mike Vlahos' kick on the Little Hoyas' 25 and recovered the ball. On the first play of the second quarter, O'Keefe passed 15 yards to Dom NiCastri, who race 10 more for a touchdown.

Bill Horan came in for more of his share of honors near the end of the third period, hugging a Tranen pass from the 13 and going over from the 6.

Twice in the final quarter Tranen called on Walter Krukowski, a short, speedy 135-pound back, who first took a 20-yard pass and ran it for 40 more to score without being touched. Tranen again converted. Second call saw Krukowski crack through center for a 52-yard touchdown trip.

Virginia Goes After Tulane set will be little Jimmy LeSane, sophomore signal caller, who also passes, but not with the skill of Michels.

The Tulane team deplaned at Richmond early this afternoon and moved to Charlottesville by bus for a final workout in Scott Stadium. The size of the Green Wave players justified all advance notices, and particularly in the line will the Cavaliers be heavily outweighed. "Tulane's so big," said one observer, "that when they come out on the field I wouldn't blame Virginia for running out the other end of the stadium."

Papit's running skill will be tested completely by the giant Tulane line which averages 235 pounds highlighted by 280-pound Jerry Helluin, right tackle.

Joe Ernst will quarterback Tulane, with Price at fullback, and George Kinek, and Bob Jones at the halves.

Mount Vernon Whips Bullis B's

Mount Vernon High whipped the Bullis Prep B team, 32-19, last night at the winner's stadium. The score was the same as in last year's game.

Royal Governor Favored at Bowie

Lynch 'Cap Tops First Day Program

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Royal Governor, who may miss being the stake horse of the year but who without a doubt is the most improved horse of 1949, heads the field in the $10,000 added Thomas K. Lynch Memorial, feature of today's opening Bowie program. Post time for the first race is 1 p. m.

Despite top weight of 125 pounds, the stalwart performer from the barn of Mrs. Ethel du-Pont Weir probably will march postward as an 2-1 choice for the test of a mile and a sixteenth.

Favoritism finally has caught up with Royal Governor who has regularly appeared in the winner's circle this year as a surprise package with the accompanying long mutuel price.

However, the son of Pilate arrived at the Prince Georges County track after a successful campaign in New York which saw him win three stakes in a row before finishing third in a race won by the formidable Three Rings.

Chief opposition for Royal Governor is likely to come from Honeywell Farm's Mesmer. While his record is not as impressive as that of the probable choice, Mesmer gets in action with 115 pounds and belongs in the thick of contention.

Others slated to be in Starter Bill Schamerhorn's lineup are: The Hirsch Jacobs-trained entry of Our John Wm. and Laurania, September, Cochise, Fancy Flyer, Manchaic, Laran, Service Pilot, My Emma, Camargo, Butler, Orcele and Seaward.

Today's program marks the beginning of a 13-day session, the last major track racing in the east. Charles Town as usual will put the finishing touches on the sport in this area with its 15-day meeting opening December 5.

Chief improvements since the last meeting include a new building housing the administration offices as well as the headquarters for the racing secretary. The old buildings outside of the paddock gate have been razed and the ground has been filled in to afford a new and spacious parking area for clubhouse customers.

The racing strip, long regarded one of the safest in the country, retains its soil composition but has been extensively worked over and a portion of the deep cushion has been scraped away.

WNBW Will Televise Races at Bowie

The cofeature and feature races from Bowie will be televised daily by Station WNBW starting Monday. The races will start on WNBW at 3:15 p. m. and will run to approximately 4:15 p. m. Announcers will be Chuck Thompson and Ray Haight.

Mrs. Simmonds Wins Class A Turkey Golf

Mrs. A. G. Simmonds, with a score of 91-14—77, won the Class A Turkey Golf Tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday. Mrs. Henry Rile was second with 90-10—80 and Mrs. Owen Hines, third with 91-10—81.

In Class B, Mrs. Howard Hopkins led with 104-22—82, followed by Mrs. Fran Richey, 11-26—85, and Mrs. Conrad Seibold, 115-26—89. Mrs. John Hogan's 105-29—76 led Class C players.

Mrs. Samuel Hauser won the club's putting championship after a playoff with Mrs. Hal Nelson. They were tied with 30 putts each, but Mrs. Hauser won the playoff on the practice green.

—It's THE Game, You Know—

Yale, Harvard Open, Close Seasons Today

By Red Smith

New York, Nov. 18 (NYHT).—When the football teams of California and Stanford meet, it is known in the San Francisco Bay area as the big game. The Cambridge, Mass., mind is more direct and, possibly, simpler. When Harvard and Yale meet, it is known on the banks of the Charles as THE game.

Smith

Tomorrow Harvard and Yale play, for the sixty-seventh time, in the Yale Bowl attended by such traditional trappings as 'coon coats from the Harding Administration, rusty derby hats, crew haircuts and pants that are just a trifle too short for their weawers. In the Yale Bowl, however, the event is not known as the game. It is called the Harvard game, to distinguish it from the other contest on the annual schedule.

Among the ignoranti there is a notion that Harvard has lost seven games this season and Yale four. This is incorrect. Harvard has not lost any games this season, because the Harvard season will not open until 1:45 p. m. tomorrow. (Most colleges start their games at 1:30 or 2 o'clock; Harvard and Yale, being institutions of the highest possible learning, go in for fractions and split the hour into quarters.)

Harvard's attitude toward its one-game season was, until this year, one of unblushing candor. If a squad member stood on the playing field for as long as one second while the game was on, he received no letter—either white or crimson or scarlet—even though he may have performed deeds of indescribable valor for 60 minutes on every other Saturday afternoon of the autumn.

Yale, straining democracy to the cracking point, always recognized Princeton as well as Harvard. On clear afternoon., anyhow, a Yale plyer could earn his "Y" by starting either the Princeton or Harvard game, or by taking part in both. Tolerance was always a watchword in New Haven.

Presumably the Harvards polished off their training tonight by polishing off a few seidels of champagne. The bubble binge on the eve of the game is a revered Cambridge custom.

According to hoary practice, it is the duty of the captain of the last Harvard team that defeated Yale to stand drinks for the house at this party. Ken O'Donnell, captain of the 1948 team, qualified as the Patsy this year because his team came along late in the game last fall and pulled out the decision. This was Ken's first opportunity to play genial host, and it is conceivable that he may weary of the role before he is relieved of it.

Being captain of a good Harvard team just before a slump hits Cambridge can be a costly business. The job can keep a guy broke for years and years. Sometimes it would seem cheaper to buy a team capable of whipping Yale than to keep on buying the booze until a student team gets you off the hook.

Bill Bennings . . .

DEAR FOLKS: At Bowie.

This track has come a long way since the teen-age period of this century. The plant was next to impossible to reach by auto from Washington and the only means of transportation was the old W. B. & A. electric railroad. Two parlor cars were started from 15th st. and New York ave. nw., for the clubhouse sports of the day.

From 15th and H sts. ne. a few dusty coaches borrowed from the old Chesapeake Beach railway were dragged to the oval. But the pay-off was the open box freight cars into which the ordinary customers crowded like cattle to reach the scene of action. Dice and three-card-monte games kept the customers warm and made them forget the bumps. And now we kick because we can't find a parking place next to the gate.—BILL.

Kidnaper Bent on Rape Slain by Navy Girl

escapade, officers said, was that Ellyett had herded Miss Koenig and Bryant into, and out of, the homes of at least two of his sisters, at gunpoint, during the night. Both sisters pleaded with him against his acts, officers said, but to no avail.

Howard Mathers of Clifton Station, Va., in Fairfax County, said last night that one stop, apparently the first, was in his home. His wife was Ellyett's sister. He said the trio were in his home from 9:30 to 10:30 p. m., but he saw no signs of a gun or of force.

At the final visit, well after midnight, Bryant finally escaped, officers said. He took another auto and pursued Ellyett vainly, finally losing the kidnap car.

Then, as he was reporting to Virginia State Troopers, Miss Koenig telephoned Clarke County Deputy Sheriff S. M. Carper at Berryville. When he asked what was the matter, she replied:

"Murder. I killed a man. I shot him."

Carper said he learned she had appeared at the home of Alfred Nicodemus, manager of the Clarke County poor farm.

There, at Carper's telephoned directions, she handed over the .38-caliber pistol to Nicodemus.

From stories of Miss Koenig and Miss Bryant, officers reconstructed the ride this way:

Ellyett started the ride with Bryant, and went to Miss Koenig's rooming house. She came out to the car to talk to him. Ellyett then drew the gun, forced her into the car, shortly after 7 p. m. He forced Bryant to drive.

Officers would not specify places where the party stopped, except the last one, where Bryant escaped because authorities were still collecting evidence and taking statements.

Part of the drive was aimless, with Ellyett entreating Miss Koenig to submit and making wild threats of death, officers said. He threatened to shoot her or blow her up or both, officers said.

The final stop, officers said, was at the home of Mrs. Virginia Owens, a sister of Ellyet, east of Berryville. There again, relatives pleaded with Ellyett to no avail. But Bryant escaped by a back door.

Ellyett then forced Miss Koenig back into the car, officers said, and drove off at high speed. Bryant obtained the Owens family car and started in pursuit. On losing the trail, he drove to Berryville where shortly after 5 a. m. he told the story to State Trooper James A. Ward.

Before Ward could put out a teletype message to pick up the Ellyett car, Miss Koenig's call came to Carper.

The Ellyett car was about three and one-half miles west of Berryville, officers said, although the last stop had been east of Berryville. The car was off the road, near a wooded area.

Miss Koenig told officers that when they arrived there, Ellyet came out from under the wheel, walked around and got in the right side of the front seat, forcing her under the wheel.

Then, she said, he waved the gun, and the dynamite, threatening to use both and blow both to death. He repeatedly demanded that she submit to him, she said, and finally began a struggle with her.

Nicodemus and officers said that she told them he first made her take her shoes off. Then the struggle began. Officers said her blouse was torn and buttons were missing. They added there were powder burns on her skirt.

Officers said they found Ellyet's body, still warm, slumped down in the right front seat of his car.

In the coat pocket, the officers said, they found another .38 caliber revolver, a cheap one, and about 50 cartridges. In the back seat was the dynamite bundle. On Ellyett's belt was a holster from which Miss Koenig told officers she seized the gun.

Miss Koenig told officers she had known Ellyett for several years. He had never finished grade school, they said, and had been arrested previously, once for brandishing a gun. The charge was reduced, it was said, to disorderly conduct.

Miss Koenig said she had gone out with Ellyett occasionally but never "sweathearted" him. Finally, at the direction of her father, Paul Koenig, of Stephens City, Va., she broke off with him. Since that time, she said, he had threatened her.

She added she had accepted rides to her home from Arlington in Ellyett's car.

Miss Koenig was graduated in 1947 from the Middletown High School, as salutatorian of her class. She is described as 5 feet 2 inches tall; weight 115 pounds, brown hair and green eyes.

After leaving high school, she lived in San Francisco for a year, then came to the Washington area. She works as an artist in the illustrators' section, Navy Bureau of Personnel.

Relatives say she takes art lessons several nights a week. One relative said she is engaged to a Navy sailor now stationed at Pensacola, Fla.

After she made a written statement yesterday to Edward McC. Williams, Commonwealth's attorney of Clarke County, she was released in $1000 bond, signed by her father.

Seven hours after the shooting, her brother, Metropolitan Police Pvt. Paul Koenig of the Thirteenth Precinct, turned in a missing person report on Miss Koenig to Arlington police. He had not been advised of the kidnaping.

Ellyett's parents have operated the Brumback farm at Old Chapel, near Boyce, Va., for three years. The youth was born at Paris, Va., lived at various places with his family, but never finished grade school, the parents said.

Besides them and Mrs. Mathers and Mrs. Owens he leaves two brothers, Howard Ellyett of Boyce and James Ellyett, jr., now in Japan with the armed forces, and five other sisters. They are Mrs. Elvira Spindle and Mrs. Edward Kennan, Berryville; Mrs. Cletus Dick, Winchester, Va., and Mrs. Alvin Poe and Mrs. Willard Pearson of Clifton Station. His parents said he had lived with Mrs. Poe while working as a painter in the Arlington area, but returned home a week ago.

'Plenty of Blood' Threat Is Uttered In NMU Struggle

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—An uneasy quiet descended on headquarters of the CIO National Maritime Union today after two days of brawling blamed by President Joseph Curran on "desperate" Communist agitators.

Despite a threat by left-wing members that today there would be "plenty of blood on 17th st.," where union headquarters is located, there were no disorders. A force of about 100 policemen stood guard however.

Curran said fighting that broke out Wednesday and yesterday was "part of a national plan of desperation by the Communist Party."

"We will not permit hoodlums who are spurred and used by the Communist Party to prevent our organizations from functioning," the international president told reporters.

Government Foils Colombia Terror Plot

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Conservative Government said today it had broken up a vast plot to spread terror across western Colombia with fire and dynamite on the eve of the presidental election November 27, which Liberals are boycotting.

Backed by virtual martial law under a week-old state of siege, the government announced more than 100 persons have been arrested and a big store of explosives seized at Armenia, a city of 50,000 in the Quindio coffee region.

Quick Trial Looms In Girl's Slaying

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (AP).—The State moved swiftly today to send Fred Stroble—confessed sex slayer who says "I don't deserve to live"—to California's gas chamber.

"We will ask for the death penalty," said Deputy District Attorney Adolph Alexander as Stroble was arraigned on a charge of murdering 6-year-old Linda Joyce Glucoft.

The 66-year-old grandfather of Linda's favorite playmate was handcuffed as he pushed through an orderly corridor crowd into municipal court.

He was silent, even when Judge Leroy Dawson asked if he intended to obtain a lawyer. A deputy public defender talked to him briefly, then told the court he did not plan to employ private counsel, at least not immediately.

The public defender suggested a delay in the preliminary hearing, but Judge Dawson set it for Monday. Presumably Stroble then will be bound over for trial in Superior Court. Alexander said the trial can begin early in December.

A showing of premeditation is necessary for conviction of first-degree murder, carrying the death penalty, but Alexander said: "Stroble's admission that he previously molested this little girl is sufficient evidence."

The strangled, stabbed body of little Linda was found early Tuesday beside an incinerator in the backyard at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ruben Hausman, son-in-law and daughter of Stroble and parents of Rochelle Hausman, Linda's six-year-old playmate.

Mother Rescued in Bridge Leap

Three sailors, fully clad, plunged into the Anacostia River yesterday and rescued a 38-year-old mother who had jumped moments before from the 11th st. bridge.

Shortly after the rescue, she thanked the three, Navy authorities said, and said she had been depressed and was "glad I got it off my chest."

She was identified as Mrs. Eunice Lucier, 201 Huron dr., Forest Heights, Md., wife of Robert Lucier, an engineer at the Naval Gun Factory, near where she leaped.

Navy authorities said Howard J. Barbary, 20, a storekeeper, and Louis I. Lazar, 24, a yeoman, were walking near the river's edge when shouts from the bridge above attracted their attention. They spotted Mrs. Lucier in the water, and dived in. Shortly afterward, Navy officers said, Albert Beveridge, 18, a specialist, was attracted by the noise and also plunged in.

Barbary and Lazar were having trouble in the water, they told officers, because Mrs. Lucier's coat was over her head. Beveridge helped get the coat from over her head, and the three held her up in the water till a boat arrived.

Mrs. Lucier was treated at the Gun Factory dispensary for shock, and then transferred to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation. Officers said she has a two-month-old son.

Trained Kitchen Help Seen Saving Dishes

Kitchen catastrophies are the bane of untaught employes, a group of cafeteria managers was told yesterday.

Proper dish collecting, cleaning practices and observance of common-sense rules of accident prevention will cut down accidents, William J. Hyland of the Travelers' Insurance Co. of New York, told members of the School Food Service Association at the Statler Hotel.

"Glasses and dishes don't need to break," Hyland said, adding that half of the injuries to kitchen employes result from unsafe practices of other employes.

Civil Service to Seek 9000 Census Clerks, Half of them to Be Here

CLERICAL JOBS: Civil Service is planning to give a special exam soon to recruit upward of 9000 temporary clerks for the Census Bureau.

About half of the jobs will be located here; the remainder in Philadelphia. The hiring will start early next year. The jobs will last an average of a year, some as long as 18 months.

Appointments from the special exam won't lead to permanent Civil Service status unless the commission changes its present plans. The jobs will be strictly temporary and the 6 percent for retirement won't be deducted from salaries paid the employes.

The Civil Service test will take the temporary census jobs out of patronage and they will be filled on a merit basis. The army of clerks will be needed to analyze results of next year's general census.

STORY: The other morning at a White House staff meeting the subject drifted to the President's early rising habit. The President broke in to explain:

"I've been getting up early for many years. As I recall, I acquired the habit of getting up between 5 and 5:30 a. m. when I was serving in the Army at Fort Sill, Okla."

"That bugler must have given you a rough time by waking you at that hour," an assistant commented.

"The bugler," the President came back with a chuckle, "why I had to wake him up."

ELLIS ARNALL, the former Governor of Georgia, is reported to have rejected an offer to be appointed Assistant State Secretary for Public Affairs to succeed George V. Allen.

Russell Forbes, an authority on Government purchases and supplies, has been appointed deputy administrator of the General Services Administration. James W. Follin, who has been acting deputy, becomes special assistant to Administrator Jess Larson. He'll be in charge of planning and public works programs.

Forbes will be assigned two major tasks which are: (1) to bring about the greatest possible coordination of civilian and military supply activities, and (2) to decentralize Government purchasing to bring it nearer production centers in order to give the little businessman a break.

Forbes was the leader of the Hoover Commission task force on Government supply. The recommendations of this group led to the creation of the General Services agency.

Assistant Interior Secretary C. Girard "Jebbie" Davidson has important support to be promoted to Undersecretary. He isn't likely to land the job.

RFC: The 4400 employes of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation have been given pay boosts in line with the new pay-reclassification act. Some few employes didn't get any increase. The boost was made retroactive to October 30 and it was included in paychecks distributed yesterday. RFC has until next May to convert its people from the present (EO) executive order pay scale to the rates in the new classification act.

UNION POLITICS: CIO's right-wing Government Workers Union is finally slugging hard at CIO's left-wing United Public Workers. And apparently with effective results.

GWU is lining up more and more of UPWA's members. Its publications quote CIO President Phil Murray as referring to UPWA as the "worst Communist mess I've ever seen." UPWA's tactics and strategy are belittled by GWU which has the full support of the CIO.

Meantime, the CIO high command is preparing to hold a hearing of UPWA's top officers and it's a foregone conclusion that the left-wing outfit will be kicked out of the CIO and GWU assigned its jurisdiction. The CIO, it's reported, will then by ready to finance a big-scale drive to enlist Federal workers into the GWU.

She Felt Ill, Too, Wife of Milk Victim Tells Police

Thought It Was 'Nerves' at First; Drank From Same Bottle as Husband

Mrs. Margaret Randle said yesterday she had felt "kind of ill" after drinking from the same bottle of milk from which her husband drank before he was fatally stricken.

Police are investigating the possibility that Joseph E. Randle, 33-year-old cab driver, was killed by poisoned milk Monday in his home at 328 34th st. ne.

Randle was taken to Casualty Hospital Monday afternoon when he became violently ill. He died there Wednesday night.

A sample of the milk Randle drank was injected into three laboratory mice Thursday. They died. Police were puzzled when Mrs. Randle told them she was certain she drank some of the same milk Monday, after her husband had been taken to the hospital, and had not been affected.

Reconsidered Friday

But yesterday she reconsidered and, according to Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty, head of the homicide squad, said:

"Now that I think it over I did feel kind of ill. But I thought it was my nerves, because of the sudden illness of my husband, and I didn't think about the milk. So maybe that's what it was."

At this point, police can not even be certain that Randle was poisoned. This will not be known until chemical, pathological and bacteriological tests are completed in the Health Department laboratory.

Police also were interested to learn that the Randles' pet dog, a fox terrier, may have been poisoned.

Dog Treated

The Southeast Veterinarian Hospital said the dog was treated there last January and again the following April, both times apparently for the effects of poison.

A spokesman at the animal hospital said the dog was returned there again several weeks ago but had no symptoms of chemical poisoning, that it appeared to be suffering from a bacteriological infection.

This spokesman said that Randle removed the dog from the hospital after explaining he did not want to be put to more expense. Randle took the dog to the Animal Rescue League, 71 O st. nw., where it was put to death in a gas chamber.

Court Session Ended Early For Football

A recollection of an interhigh football game here 30 years ago prompted Judge James R. Kirkland of District Court yesterday to adjourn court an hour earlier.

Judge Kirkland was presiding at the trial of James W. Sacchino, 49, a used-car dealer accused of embezzling $20,000 in automobiles from clients. The judge looked at the clock at 3 p. m. and told the jurors they would be excused.

He said he recalled the football series of 1919. Judge Kirkland then played end for Business High. Joseph C. Turco, attorney for Sacchino, was playing halfback for McKinley Tech. The two teams played and Business lost.

Yesterday, Turco's son was playing football for Western High, and the father asked to be allowed to see the game.

"The linesman of Business accedes to the request of the back from McKinley. The court will adjourn," Kirkland said.

(Thomas Turco was sent into the game as a substitute back. Western won over Bell, 45-2. Turco was tackled in the end zone, giving Bell its only score.)

In testimony before the court adjournment, a turkey farmer named Arthur H. Mitchell, jr., of Greenwood, Va., said Sacchino promised him $1135 for a Willys Jeep, but failed to pay off. Mitchell said all he received was $210 and a note for $1200 on which he has been unable to collect.

Bids to Finance $7 Million Water Bond Issue Asked

The Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission has called for bids on a seven-million-dollar bond issue to finance an extensive program of water and sewage expansion in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

A spokesman for the commission, describing the bond issue as the largest in its history, said the bids would be opened at WSSC office in Hyattsville at 3 p. m. December 1. The bonds will be payable in periods ranging from 25 to 40 years, he added.

Of the total expenditure, four million dollars will be used for new water facilities, including a new filtration plant and other equipment; $2,500,000 will be used for general construction and $500,000 will be devoted to storm water drainage, the spokesman said.

Magnificent Austrian Art Collection Opens For Public Sunday at National Gallery

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

An air of tense, dramatic excitement hung yesterday over the National Gallery of Art.

At 5 p. m. Sunday the finest collection of art masterpieces ever to be brought to the United States goes on public view.

A press preview of those treasures loaned from Austria was held yesterday. Roaming through the 18 packed galleries which hold them produced a great sensation—even to one who is not an artist or a connoisseur of art.

A mere listing of the highlights of the collection fails to describe them, but only labels the fabulous treasure which Americans will now view:

The works of six of the world's greatest painters at the very peak of their power—Correggio, Titian, Tintoretto, Paolo Veronese, Rubens, Velazquez. Plus paintings by Rembrandt, Vermeer, Hooch, Clouet, Ruisdael, Steen, Ter Boch.

The world's most famous salt cellar—the Gold Salt made by Benvenuto Cellini about 1540.

Renaissance bronzes by Bertoldi di Giovanni, Cattaneo, Vincenzo Danti, Leone Leoni, Ricco, Giovanni Bologna.

A collection of suit-of-mail armor made for such celebrated Hapsburgs as Maximilian I, Ferdinand I, Maximilian II and Matthias.

Classic Paintings

From the walls look down such great titles in painting as Titian's Pope Paul III," Tintoretto's Susanna and Elders," Velazquez, "Infanta Margarita Theresa," Rubens' 'The Feast of Venus."

Within glass cages stand those sensational works of art of the Vienna treasure in precious and semiprecious material . . . the rock crystal plates, the lapis lazuli bowl laid with emeralds and rubies and made in the Medici workshop, the Goblet of St. Michel.

The value of the collection can not be assigned in monetary terms.

Dr. Ernest H. Buschbeck, curator of the picture gallery at the Kunsthistorisches Museum in Vienna, from which nearly all the works come and who is here for the show, tried to express this idea:

"What would be the value of the copyright of the Bible?"

'Would Throw Him Out'

The figure of 80 million dollars has been used to describe the value of the collection, Dr. Buschbeck was reminded.

"If someone walked in and offered me a check of 80 million dollars for the collection," said Dr. Buschbeck, dressed in a lavender shirt and glen plaid suit, "I would throw him out."

This is partly because the works belong to the Austrian government and are not for sale at any price.

But it is also because a large number of them are literally priceless.

The Cellini salt cellar, which contains 9 pounds of gold, is an example.

This is the celebrated cellar about which the King of France, who ordered it, said of the wax model, "This is a hundred times more divine a thing than I had ever dreamed of. What a miracle of a man! He ought never to stop working."

CELLINI'S CELLAR—At yesterday's press preview of the Austrian art treasures, Eric Strohmer, curator of sculpture at the Kunsthistorisches Museum of Vienna, describes the famous gold salt cellar made by Benvenuto Cellini, to Bette Hall, a visitor, of 3920 Harrison st. nw. It is made of nine pounds of gold

"Its real value," said Buschbeck, "could never be expressed in terms of money. Its real value is that it is the greatest goldsmith's work of the Renaissance."

Shows Largest Emerald

"Five million . . . 20 million dollars," said Erich Strohmer, curator of sculpture, decorative arts and tapestries in the Vienna Museum as he removed it from its glass cage yesterday and placed it on a table for photographing. ". . . that money would not buy it."

Strohmer removed the cover from an emerald unguent jar made about 1642 by Dionysio Miseroni.

"It is the largest emerald in the world," he said. "Value? The emerald alone—and this is aside from the art work—is worth 90 million dollars."

We asked him to repeat. He repeated it three times . . . "Ninety million dollars."

Among the paintings is a canvas considered by many critics as the greatest work of Jan Vermeer, The Artist in His Studio.

Acquired for $100

This is the canvas for which the late Andrew Mellon, whose endowment established the National Gallery, once reportedly offered a million dollars. A German family acquired it a century ago for $100. It is the canvas which was selected by Adolf Hitler as the most important acquisition for his proposed museum at Linz.

To protect them against bombardment during the war, the Austrians stored these works of art in salt mines, in a monastery cellar three stories under ground and in another vault, also three floors under the ground, in the Postoffice Savings Bank in Vienna.

For all time generations may well thank General Patton's Army which rescued them from their underground storage and from the Nazis who were set vindictively to destroy them.

When the Austrian cabinet approved shipment of the masterpieces here on loan, the Communists began to howl of subservience to the "art robbers of Wall Street."

Yesterday at the National Gallery we looked hard—but didn't see anyone we recognized for sure as a Wall Street art robber.

Finance Firm Offers Return Of Seized Car

Rutherford M. Whitehorn, of Lorfax, Va., can have his auto back with a clear title.

The offer was made yesterday by the Nolan Finance Co., 1102 New York ave. nw., which financed the purchase of a car by Whitehorn.

At the same time two men, charged with highway robbery in connection with repossession of the auto last Tuesday were released under $500 bond each in Municipal Court for their appearance at an extradition hearing December 20.

They are Irving C. Thomas, 24, of 1617 D st. ne., and Leslie L. Corturiendt, 18, of 1343 29th st. se. Both surrendered to District police Thursday.

The warrants were issued after Whitehorn told Virginia State Police that two men forced him, his wife and two children from his car near his home and drove it away, taking along a bag of groceries and $10 in cash.

The men told police Whitehorn turned the car over to them willingly and there was no money in the car.

W. J. Nolan of the finance company said that because of Whitehorn's "dire circumstances" the company is willing to make a "charitable gesture" and give him the auto, at a $493 loss.

"That family is living in a tent. They have to travel several miles to reach it. They can't live there without a car," Nolan said he had been informed.

LaFontaine Still On Critical List

He had been confined to the hospital with abdominal ailments for the last month. Thursday he suffered a cerebral hemorrhage.

Ex-Union Aide Gets Probation After $1500 Embezzlement

A former union official found guilty of embezzling $1500 from Columbia Lodge No. 174, International Association of Machinists, was placed on probation yesterday for two years.

He is Elbert L. Hall, 55, former financial secretary of the lodge. The money was taken last June. Hall later giving himself up to police and pleading guilty.

Judge Matthew F. McGuire suspended a four-month to a year-and-a-day prison sentence.

He pointed out Hall had no prior criminal record, and had made partial restitution. One condition of the probation was that Hall make restitution in full.

In other District Court cases three men were given jail terms for selling numbers chances.

They are listed as Charles J. Lippey, 44, of 1610 Newton st. nw., given one to three months; Charles Bailey, 50, of 308 50th st. ne., one to three months, and Albert H. Frye, 55, of 1489 Newton st. nw., two to six months.

Three others were given probation terms for numbers lottery complicity. They are listed as John D. Duncan, 413 H st. nw.; Wilford A. Grove, 29, of 3300 Naylor rd. se., and Lillian E. Walker, 26, of 714 6th st. nw.

Albert E. Miller, 20, of 324 B st. se., was placed on probation for two years for stealing $200 in clothes from Goldenberg's Department Store, where he was a porter. The clothes were found in a trash wagon he used, according to the charges.

Three to nine years in prison each for housebreaking was given Alexander J. Bundy, 30, of 504 Rhode Island ave. nw., and James W. Walker, 36, of 326 McLean ave. sw.

GWU Students To Hold Inquiry Into Race Policy

The George Washington University student council said yesterday it has authorized the appointment of a student committee to investigate the university's policy of excluding Negro students.

Decision to look into the question followed an editorial in the current issue of the student newspaper, The Hatchet, urging the university to "remove the barrier it has maintained against Negro students."

Charles Crichton, president of the council, named George Fleetwood, 21-year-old senior in the school of education, to head the investigating committee.

Crichton will appoint other members with council approval at Tuesday's council meeting. Council members will call on the committee to submit a report before the university board of trustees meet December 8.

The Hatchet editorial described the university as "behind the times and insensitive to current trends in American life."

Court to Decide If Dentistry Is a Business

The Montgomery County Circuit Court has been asked to decide if dentistry is a business.

A suit filed yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Harman, 802 Dale dr., Silver Spring, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Brown, 800 Dale dr., charged Dr. Louis M. Cuvillier with converting a garage on his property at 720 Dale dr. into a two-room dental office in violation of a covenant prohibiting any business in the area.

Dr. Cuvillier declared he had obtained a building permit for the work, nearly completed, and said he had "no idea" anyone would oppose it.

Judge Stedman Prescott gave Dr. Cuvillier until December 8 to show why an injunction should not be issued.

Blind School Votes Hufty Life Pension

The controversy between the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind and its former vice president, French S. Hufty, appeared yesterday to be ready for solution as soon as a suitable place is found for him to live.

The institute's board of trustees yesterday voted Hufty a $150 monthly life pension on condition that he move from the school. Hufty is satisfied with the proposed pension and will move if a suitable apartment is found, his attorney said.

The pension was suggested Thursday by Judge Jennings Bailey after a court declaration that Hufty, 67, and blind, must leave the school. Evidence was introduced in court that he had resigned as vice president in 1948, but had continued to intervene in the school's affairs. He has been living at the school, 1808 H st. nw.

Julius Aronoff, who with Jack N. Steinberg is Hufty's attorney, said yesterday the only problem now was to find an apartment somewhere near the school where Hufty can live and conduct his profession of piano teacher and tuner.

He appealed to the public to inform him of any two-room apartment with kitchenette and bath which may be available. Hufty will be able to pay reasonable rent, he emphasized.

Chest to Wage Campaign Until Goal Is Reached

Contributors Signed In 17 Days Exceed Last Year's Similar Period by 75,000

Community Chest campaign leaders yesterday affirmed their intention of continuing their 1950 fund drive until the $3,991,719 goal is reached.

Frank Luchs, campaign chairman, announced this at a press conference at which he said that the goal, rather than any deadline, was the thing for campaign workers to consider.

He pointed out that with 17 days of the drive past, workers have enrolled about 75,000 more givers than were reported during a similar period last year. These subscribers have pledged $500,000 more than in the comparable 1948 period.

"Despite this," he said, "we are not satisfied that we have moved as fast as we would have liked."

Keep on Striving

Luchs said campaign committee members met Thursday and "unanimously voted that all soliciting units will continue to strive for the goal."

Luchs said the campaign was hampered by slow starts in several counties and by the feeling in one or two units that they had been assigned higher quotas than necessary.

Business Unit II also has lagged, Luchs said, although he added that with fewer givers, the section is doing a better job than it did last year.

Luchs said that those volunteer workers who have finished their jobs will not be asked to keep on working, although many have come to Chest headquarters and offered their services without such a request.

Aware Perfection Is Lacking

Luchs said: "We will not say our coverage is perfect. We know darn well that there are people in the organization who have neglected their job at times. The unit managers and chairman are aware of this and are taking steps to correct it."

Luchs said that during the first days of the campaign, when money was flowing in in a steady stream, the weaknesses in the campaign structure were hidden. He said that in some instances key men "had not even begun operating" until recently.

Luchs said there seemed to be no opposition to the Chest request this year "on the basis that the people don't believe in the Community Chest."

Don Bernard, advertising director of The Washington Post and chairman of the campaign's publicity, said he believed the "general attitude is different" this year. He said he noted a "more universal giving," and attributed discrepancies in quotas to the fact that crews either were not making their rounds as fast, or had to go back three or four times to make sure of pledges.

For Untruths

Trial Board Asks Firing Of Policeman

A police trial board yesterday recommended the firing of a policeman whose testimony in court contradicted his signed statement of fact in a drunken driving case.

Pvt. Phillips

The officer Pvt. James T. Phillips, Eighth Police Precinct, had faced a police trial board less than a month ago on charges of being drunk on duty, and suffered a 10-day loss of pay.

Specific charges against Phillips yesterday were: Making an untruthful statement to a superior officer, failing to state full facts of a case to the prosecutor, and conduct prejudicial to good order in the department.

He pleaded guilty to all the charges.

The charges grew out of the trial in Municipal Court on October 27 of Walter D. Cowan jr., on charges of driving under the influence of liquor.

Following Cowan's arrest, Phillips and his scout car partner, Pvt. Eugene D. Gooding, both made written statements that Cowan appeared drunk.

But at the trial Phillips testified he did not believe Cowan was intoxicated. Gooding declared the motorist was drunk. Cowan was acquitted.

Last June Phillips was shot with his service revolver at his home, 614 St. Andrew's lane, Silver Spring. His wife, Shirley said that he handed her the gun and dared her to shoot. Phillips declined to prosecute. He has been on the police force for eight years.

Fairfax Man, 79, Injured By Streetcar

A 79-year-old Fairfax County man was knocked down by a streetcar about 5:45 p. m. yesterday as he was crossing Pennsylvania ave. at E st. nw.

He was identified at Emergency Hospital as Walter A. Smith, a salesman, of Springfield, Va. The hospital said he was in an undetermined condition with a cut over his right eye.

The trolley operator, who gave his name as Romie Lee Spear, 34, of 414 Boyd ave., Takoma Park, Md., was held for questioning.

Occupants of two cars that collided at the corner of Klingle rd. and Woodley st. nw. yesterday morning were fortunate that the accident took place in front of the residence of Dr. Richard Lee Sylvester who administered first aid. One car was driven by Marion Lord, 44, of 4815 Chesapeake st. nw.

Cynthia F. Shannon, 23, who was in the other car with Joseph R. Shannon, jr., both of 4023 Kansas ave. nw., was treated at George Washington University Hospital for a broken left arm.

Wong Ying, 73, of 616 H st. nw., was struck last night in the 600 block of H st. by an auto which police say was driven by Wilbur H. Bowers, 21, of 914 Massachusetts ave. nw. He was admitted to Emergency Hospital with undetermined chest injuries.

Man Arraigned In Lottery As Pay-Off Fails

A nickel magnified 630 times caused rain to fall yesterday in the life of Roland Taylor, 34, a cook.

Jack Regis, 56, of 736 12th st. nw., went to police Thursday and told this story:

On the previous day he made a 5-cent combination numbers play with Taylor, a cook at the Ranch Restaurant, 729 12th st. nw.

When he returned Thursday to collect the cook told him he could not pay him because the pickup man hadn't collected his play the previous day. The usual payoff on a nickel hit would be $31.50.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the vice squad, advised Regis to swear out a warrant against Taylor, charging operation of a lottery.

Taylor, who lives at 1333 Emerson st. ne., was arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence and his case continued until November 30. He was freed in $1000 bond.

Clifford Berryman's Condition 'Satisfactory'

Condition of Clifford K. Berryman, noted Evening Star political cartoonist, was reported as still "satisfactory" last night at Emergency Hospital. Berryman collapsed of a circulatory ailment Thursday on his way to work at the Star.

Man, 78, Named Week's 'Elderly Pedestrian'

A 78-year-old Washington man, who makes certain the light is green before crossing a street, was named "elderly pedestrian" of the week yesterday.

Dulin

He is J. Ernest Dulin of 1707 Columbia rd. nw. The nomination was made by Traffic Officer Raymond C. Davis, who observed Mr. Dulin obeying safety regulations Thursday at 14th and G sts. nw.

Dulin, who has lived in the District 40 years, received a new hat. The awards are made as part of the Traffic Advisory Board's effort to reduce the traffic accident rate

* * * * * *

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Right Rev. William T. Manning, 83, former Protestant Episcopal Bishop of New York for 25 years and a longtime foe of easy divorce, died in St. Luke's Hospital today.

He entered the hospital November 4 after returning from a vacation in Maine. The cause of death was announced as "bladder and kidney involvement."

Members of his family and the hospital chaplain, the Rev. Otis R. Rice, were at his bedside when death came at 5:10 p. m.

The British-born Bishop Manning played a major role in the building of the huge Cathedral of St. John the Divine here. He preached his farewell sermon there three years ago upon his retirement. It was a defense of "the sacramental religion of the Scriptures and the Holy Catholic Church."

A firm upholder of marriage as a sacrament, he criticized King Edward VIII for leaving the British throne to marry a divorcee.

He also expressed belief repeatedly in the eventual unification of all Christian churches, and denounced lotteries, paganism and the joint income tax return for married couples.

Bishop Manning made easy divorce the subject of his major public utterance since his retirement.

In a 1947 statement sent to two church publications, he censored two bishops of his church—the Right Rev. William R. Moody of Lexington, Ky., and the Right Rev. Frank Whittington Creighton of Michigan—for sanctioning the marriages of two ministers to divorcees.

A Mockery

He said the bishops' interpretations of a new liberalized marriage canon in the church would make a "ghastly mockery" of the marriage ceremony.

In 1945 Bishop Manning stopped Elliott Roosevelt, then twice-divorced, from serving as a vestryman at St. James Church in Hyde Park, N. Y.

He said Roosevelt was not in "good standing" in the church.

The church's vestry board voted to "sustain the wishes" of the bishop.

"Has any man, King or commoner, the right to seek happiness by running around with another man's wife?"

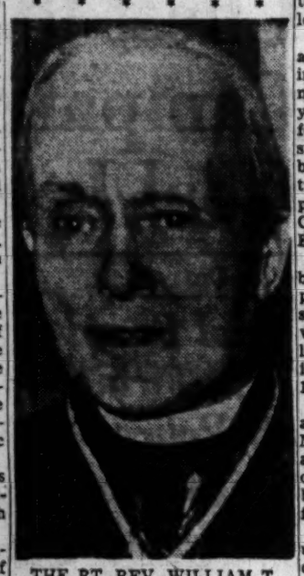
He answered his own question by saying that "such defiance of God's law" could not lead to happiness.

During his later years as bishop he also made public attacks on President Roosevelt's plan for reform of the Supreme Court, revision of the church's Common Prayer Book, and the joint income tax return for married couples.

The latter, he said, would encourage "divorce, celibacy and a mercenary attitude toward intended marriage."

Blasted Hitler

He was blasting the Hitler regime and anti-Semitism in Germany as early as March, 1933, and became a strong supporter of full aid to Britain and France before this country entered the war.



THE RT. REV. WILLIAM T. MANNING
Dies at 83

A native of Northampton, England, Bishop Manning came to this country with his parents when he was 16 years old. After his education at the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., he held a rectorship at Redlands, Calif., and then returned to the university to teach dogmatic theology.

He was rector at Lansdowne, Pa., and Christ Church at Nashville, Tenn., before coming to New York as assistant rector and vicar of St. Agnes Chapel.

He became rector of St. Agnes in 1908 and held that post until he was elected bishop in 1921.

Bishop Manning was succeeded by the Rt. Rev. Charles K. Gilbert as head of the New York Diocese.

Surviving are his wife, Florence, and two daughters, Miss Frances Manning of New York and Mrs. Griffith B. Coale of Stonington, Conn., wife of the noted muralist. He also leaves a granddaughter.

Canon Thomas A. Sparks, of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, said the body would lie in state at the cathedral beginning at 6 p. m. Sunday until noon Tuesday, when a burial office and requiem will be offered at the cathedral.

Prior to the noon service, Canon Sparks said, there will be three additional requiems Tuesday morning, at 7:30, 8 and 9 o'clock. Canon Sparks said the burial eventually would be at the cathedral.

Knute Bjorka Dies; Aide at Agriculture

Knute Bjorka, 61, livestock marketing research expert of the Department of Agriculture, died yesterday in Doctors Hospital after a long illness.

Entering the department in 1930 as a livestock marketing economist in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Mr. Bjorka for the past 10 years has been directly responsible for an extensive program of livestock marketing research which has been carried out in cooperation between the State colleges and experimental stations of the North Central States and the Bureau of Economics.

He was also the author of a number of bulletins and special articles published by the department and several experimental stations, and was coauthor of a widely used college textbook, 'Livestock Marketing," published by McGraw-Hill in 1941.

W. D. Jamieson Dies; Lawyer, Writer Here

William D. Jamieson, 76, attorney, newspaper columnist and former Iowa Congressman, died unexpectedly yesterday afternoon in his apartment, 3500 14th st. nw., shortly after returning from his annual trip to his birthplace, Shenandoah, Iowa.

Mr. Jamieson

Mrs. Rena E. Jamieson, his wife and only survivor, said that her husband had been taken ill last week in Iowa from what doctors called "nervous exhaustion." They returned here Sunday, she said, and Mr. Jamieson was showing improvement until he passed away.

A lawyer here, Mr. Jamieson also wrote "The Window Seat," a weekly syndicate letter for country newspapers. His final column, written last week, concerned the coal and steel strikes.

Before coming to Washington in 1909 as a member of the Sixty-first Congress, he edited and published at different times the Ida Grove Pioneer, the Columbus Junction Gazette and the Shenandoah World, from 1893 until 1916.

He was a member of the Iowa State Senate from 1907 until 1909 when he resigned to enter Congress. He declined to be a candidate for reelection in 1910, and resumed newspapering in Iowa.

He served as postmaster of Shenandoah in 1915-16 when he resigned to become assistant treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, and director of finance during the Wilson campaign.

In 1936 he married Mrs. Rena E. Moore at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church here. She is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Peddicord of Maryland.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

How to Make Wine Salad Dressing

Attention E.B.L. of Glen Burnie: In response to your request for the recipe for Wine Salad Dressing as served by a Tulsa, Okla., restaurant, here is what M. E. N. of Washington has to say:

"I believe I have the recipe for the wine oil salad dressing requested by E. B. L. This recipe was given to me by a neighbor in Tulsa who told me the wife of a restaurant manager had given it to her. This restaurant was in the 500 block of Main st. I have forgotten the name, but they also had a restaurant in Oklahoma City.

"I have not tried this recipe, but was told it was a very popular salad dressing at this particular place.

"I hope this is what E. B. L. wants.

WINE SALAD DRESSING

Combine:
1½ cups salad oil
4 cloves garlic, chopped
Set in refrigerator over night, then strain.
Beat:
¼ cup cream honey
1 teaspoon salt
Add the following, beating after each addition:
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ cup red wine vinegar chilled oil

M. E. N."

Also, H. J. of Silver Spring writes:

"While visiting in Oklahoma City, I had the same experience with a salad dressing. After I returned home, I wanted the same dressing so I wrote the restaurant and asked if they sold it. Fortunately for me, they did, so I order it directly from them. Perhaps you could do the same thing. If you don't find a recipe it would be worth a try."

Thank you both so much for sending this information.

Attention V. B.: Mrs. M. C. T. of Washington has written that cherry stain can be purchased at a paint store on New York ave. You can contact the store by phoning National 8610. Also, Mrs. C. M. of Washington has sent this formula for mixing a cherry stain:

Italian burnt sienna, ¾ pound.
Raw linseed oil, 2 pints.
Turpentine, 1½ pints.
Japan drier, ½ pint.
Makes about ½ gallon of stain.

Thank you very much for this information.

To A. V. F.: B. B. has some information about Murphy bed mattresses in which you may be interested. You can reach B. B. by calling Michigan 0974.

You have helped me several times in your column, so I take great pleasure in returning your help. I read a request from a mother asking for new recipes for an ulcer patient's diet. You recommend a certain book, "Understand Your Ulcer," which is very good. But having cooked for an ulcer patient for some time now, I am constantly searching for a variety in diet, too. Therefore, I would like to recommend another book which I think is quite good. It is "The Cookbook for Ulcer Patients" by Drs. Walter Aurell and Co Tul, published by Crowell and may be purchased at any good book store. It contains both types of diets, milk and milk-free, I have found it quite helpful and hope that others may do likewise.

W. R. S.

Thank you for your thoughtfulness!

To R. L. of Alexandria and E. B. M. and A Reader, both of Washington, who have inquired about removing rust stains from bathtubs:

Persistently appearing rust on porcelain and enamel fixtures is usually caused by the breaking or wearing away of the enamel, exposing the under surface of metal. A constant water drip will do this. When this happens, the only sure way to eliminate the problem is to cover the exposed metal.

If the worn or broken area is in a place where it is exposed to standing water, the patch may soften and break away in time, but since this seems to be the only way to correct the trouble—it is probably worth a try.

Here's the way to go about patching the worn surface: Clean the surface, dry, and wipe thoroughly with carbon tetrachloride or varsol to remove all oil and grease. Allow to dry completely and apply white liquid porcelain enamel with the small brush which comes with the product. It can be purchased at most well-stocked hardware and paint stores.

The stain from rust can sometimes be removed with a mild abrasive such as a kitchen cleansing powder which has been mixed with kerosene. Or, allowing water with household bleach in it to stand in the tub all night will sometimes remove the stain. Use a cup of bleach to a tub of water. Do not use a stronger concentration of bleach than this or you might roughen the surface of the tub and make cleansing even more difficult.

I wondered if any of your readers would be interested in the "wartime" English economy recipe I put here. The cream is excellent for desserts, etc., and unnoticeable as not being the real thing, in these days when we all have to economize. G. M. J.

MOCK CREAM

1 cup milk.
1¼ oz. butter or margarine, unsalted.
2 tablespoons sugar.
Vanilla to taste.

Mix cornstarch with one tablespoon of cold milk, add rest of milk, boiling, return to fire; stir, 2 minutes, gently cool. Cream butter or margarine with sugar until fluffy; whip cornstarch mixture; whip into butter mixture a little at a time, add vanilla and whisk until light and fluffy. Put into refrigerator to set.

Thank you, G. M. J., for sharing this recipe with us.

I bought a new mahogany drop-leaf table and would like to know the best way to care for it, such as waxing, etc.

A. G.

Apply a thin layer of paste or liquid wax to the table, allow to dry completely and then give it a thorough vigorous rubbing. In applying a durable waxed finish to furnish to furniture it is really the rubbing which makes the difference between a truly beautiful finish and one which is not. The wax should be rubbed until the surface is dry and has a soft gleam, no sign of wax visable. When applied in this way it is necessary to reapply it only two or three times a year. In between care consists entirely of dusting and polishing with a soft, dry, lint-free cloth.

PETUNIA!

Today I sing the melancholy
Winter Weather Blues.
I got an ugly rain spot
On my nice suede shoes.

But it will disappear, Petunia, if you'll rub it gently with an emery board.

Iranian Monarch Host at Dinner, Reception

Shah Entertains Trumans Brilliantly

THE SHAH OF IRAN entertained last evening at a dinner honoring the President and Mrs. Truman. Guests were received at 8 o'clock in the terrace banquet room of the Shoreham Hotel. Afterward there was a reception in the ballroom for top diplomats, officials and socialites of Washington.

In a toast to the Shah at the dinner, President Truman expressed the hope that the United States and Iran "can be of mutual help to each other." The Shah praised President Truman's qualities of leadership, his "candor and courage," said the American Chief Executive had endeared himself to Iranian hearts.

The Shah said Iran had demonstrated her friendship for the United States and "will do so again in the common cause of peace and for the welfare of our two countries."

In accordance with protocol, the Iranian monarch received his 700 guests standing alone.

The huge ballroom was decorated with cut flowers in green, white and red, colors of Iran, and an elaborate buffet supper was served the guests who remained long after midnight.

President and Mrs. Truman left early in the evening, not long after the reception began. Mrs. Truman was wearing midnight blue lace with long white gloves.

With Iranian Envoy

AT THE dinner for the President and Mrs. Truman, guests included the Ambassador of Iran, Hussein Ala; Mme. Naseralmolk, his mother-in-law, and his daughter, Miss Iran Ala.

Others were the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fred Vinson, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, the Dean of the Corps and Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne, the Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, the Attorney General and Mrs. James Howard McGrath, Postmaster General and Mrs. Jesse Monroe Donaldson, and Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Also, Representative and Mrs. John Kee, Undersecretary of State and Mrs. James Webb, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis P. Matthews, General and Mrs. Omar Bradley, the Assistant to the President and Mrs. John Steelman, the Secretary to the President and Mrs. Charles Ross, the Chief of Staff Gen. J. Lawton Collins; the Chief of Staff, USAF, Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, and Mrs. Vandenberg; and the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, and Mrs. Sherman.

Some of the male guests looked very gay —especially the Ambassadors, with their bright, broad ribbons banding their gleaming white shirt fronts. The Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys, had a blue and orange ribbon; the Egyptian Ambassador had one of orange and wore many medals on his chest. His wife, Mme. Rahim, wore a gown of white brocade with high neck and long sleeves.

Candlelight Waltz

THE SECOND Candlelight Waltz of the season was held last evening at the Washington Club. Sidney's orchestra played in the ballroom and coffee and punch were served in the white and red drawing room.

Last evening Comdr. Lunny, Mr. Craighill and Jack Nevius gave a cocktail party and buffet supper before the waltz.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee Preu entertained for Col. and Mrs. Thomas deForth Rogers, who have recently returned from three years in Germany and are now at Fort Belvoir.

Chapter House to Mark Jubilee

A SILVER jubilee luncheon today at the Mayflower Hotel will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the DAR Chapter House Corporation. The event, to begin at 12:30 p. m., will be held in the Chinese Room. All DAR members are invited.

The history of the chapter house will be presented as part of the program. Mrs. Harry B. Gaus, one of the first presidents, will tell the early story, dating from 1907, when the first fund committee was established. She will be followed by Mrs. Jason Waterman who became chairman of the committee in 1920.

In 1924 the chapter house corporation was formed to invest the funds received toward the purchase of a house. Mrs. Harry Colfax Grove, president of the corporation in 1937, will tell of its growth from then until Miss Lillian Chenoweth, as State regent, received the deed in January, 1940.

The 23-room mansion, surrounded by beautiful gardens, has been the scene of many brilliant social functions in years past and was formerly the home of Mrs. Ralph Jenkins. Miss Chenoweth will bring its history up to date, outlining the additions and renovations made in it since it became the chapter house.

District Woman Takes Helm

Dr. Bethune Eulogized As NCNW Presidency Goes to Dr. Ferebee

By Genevieve Reynolds

A CROSS SECTION of the Nation's leaders in Government, radio, and private industry as well as women's organizations last night paid homage to 73-year-old Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, retiring president, National Council of Negro Women.

The testimonial dinner, held at the Interior Department's dining room was one of the high spots of the council's fourteenth annual meeting. Secretary of the Interior-designate Oscar Chapman and Mrs. India Edwards, executive director, Women's Division, National Democratic Committee were among those paying tribute to Mrs. Bethune as humanitarian educator and leader.

In Mrs. Edwards' tribute to Mrs. Bethune she mentioned that Mrs. Bethune had influence beyond measure with the Nation's voters during the Roosevelt elections, and that she was one of the few who believed President Truman would be elected.

Other Leaders Present

AUBREY WILLIAMS, former head of the National Youth Administration, and Chester Williams, member of the Town Hall World Seminar, were others paying tribute to Mrs. Bethune, as were Dr. Frank Horne, assistant to the Housing and Home Finance Administrator, and Dr. Richard V. Moore, president, Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla.

Other Regional Vice Presidents are Mrs. Doris Wesley of Houston, Tex., Mrs. Ora Stokes Perry of Kansas City, Mo.; Mrs. Beulah Whitby of Detroit, Mich. and Mrs. Vivian Osborne Marsh of Berkley, Calif.

Other officers elected are Mrs. Marion Elliott of Washington, recording secretary; Mrs. Otelia Jackson, assistant recording secretary; Mrs. Regina Chandler of Washington, treasurer; Mrs. Jean Capers, Cleveland member of the city council, parliamentarian; Mrs. Sue Bailey Thurman of San Francisco, historian, and Mrs. Olivia Henry of Philadelphia, chaplain.

Members of the board of directors are Mrs. Ora Lee Mitchell of New Orleans, Mrs. Eunice Carter of New York City, Mrs. Dolly Alexander of Georgia, Mrs. Dorothy Height of New York City and Mrs. Daisy Lampkin of Pittsburgh.

Dr. Dorothy B. Ferebee of this city, head of Health Services at Howard University, was elected president to succeed Dr. Bethune.

Regional vice presidents elected included Mrs. Daisy George of New York City; Mrs. Vivian Carter Mason of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Fannie Ponder of St. Petersburg, Fla.

A dramatist with a deep, melodious voice, Mary McLeod Bethune has been adviser to Government departments; consultant at the San Francisco U. N. Conference; friend of the late President Roosevelt; founder of Bethune-Cookman College and the NCWN.

Booker T. Washington Successor

MANY also regard her as the spiritual successor of Booker T. Washington. Besides being an eloquent orator, she is an equally eloquent writer. She does a weekly column for the Chicago Defender, whose publisher, John Sengstacke, was among those paying tribute to her at the testimonial dinner last night.

Born of slave parents near Maysville, S. C., in 1875, Mrs. Bethune was one of 17 children. Her elder brothers and sisters had little opportunity for education. And her chances were only slightly better, but at the age of 29 she founded what was to become the college at Daytona.

Urge Human Rights Day

RESOLUTIONS passed at the afternoon session included a recommendation that the President be asked to declare December 10 Human Rights Day, and that the council work to support the President's Civil Rights legislative program.

A second resolution recommended that the council call to the attention of the Army authorities violations of the directives to eliminate segregation in the armed forces.

The council favored Federal aid to education, expansion of health services, and health insurance. More housing, and nondiscriminatory policies in housing were recommended.

The council voted to redouble its efforts to strengthen the friendship between "women of the darker races" by exchange of information. It urged control of the atomic bomb by the U. N. and that it be outlawed as an instrument of war. A vote was also taken to support the United Nations and to use "every means within the scope of mankind under the leadership of the United Nations to secure world peace."

Miss Tully at Tea

MEMBERS of the Woman's National Democratic Club held a gala autograph tea yesterday honoring Miss Grace Tully, author of "F. D. R. My Boss." Following a discussion of the book, Miss Tully signed scores of copies.

Mrs. James A. Murray, chairman of the hospitality committee and Mrs. Julian Friant, club president, headed the receiving line with the honor guests.

Taking turns at the tea table were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Mrs. Ellen Woodward, Mrs. James J. Houghteling, Mrs. Clark Howell Woodward, Mrs. Martin Vogel, and Mrs. Leslie Biffle.

Italian Bazaar Plans Shaping; Gifts Arrive

With Donna Julia Brambilla, chairman of the Italian Bazaar, out of town; Signora Tarchani, wife of the Italian Ambassador, in New York with her husband for important U.N. meetings, and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, executive chairman, still abroad, a definite date for the benefit has not yet been set.

However, Signora Luciolli, wife of the counselor of the embassy, says, "Without fail it will be the first week in December, probably the eighth."

In the meantime there is much excitement at the embassy over the arrival of boxes from Italy with wares for the Christmas bazaar, when the embassy at 2700 16th st. will be open to the public for the first time.

Mrs. James Clement Dunn, wife of the United States Ambassador to Italy, is sending over many beautiful articles in charge of the twin daughters of the Ambassador and Signora Tarchiani who sailed this week from Italy. And Signora Tarchiani, while in Italy this past summer, collected wares for the bazaar, as did Donna Brambilla.

Spuds Get Bird From Feathered Friends

Davis, Calif. (AP).—Experiments here have dashed hopes that surplus potatoes could be used to fatten the large Western turkey and chicken crops.

Potatoes, both raw and dried, have been fed to gobblers and cacklers in extended experiments at the University of California College of Agriculture here. But the birds don't respond, reports poultry expert Frank Kratzer.

The trials were based on a tip from Europe, where potatoes are sometimes fed to chickens.

Missouri Will Show You—a Good Time!

By Nicha Soure

WELL, look who's back! The partying Tar Heels!

Fun lovin' young folk and the not-so-young folk from North Carolina will gather in a gay mood on Saturday, November 26, for the annual Thanksgiving Dance of the North Carolina State Society.

Merry doings are guaranteed for this event which will be held as usual in the large ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m.

To encourage gaiety, a group of young people will be on hand to see that everyone meets other guests at the dance. Among those on the reception committee are the Misses Carolyn Bason, Margaret Moran, Kay Kirby, Virginia Perry, Betty Jenkins, Jane Wilson, Sara Lou Peoples, Rachel and Grace Gamble and Elizabeth Starnes.

Now They'll Show You

THE Missouri State Society will also hold a Thanksgiving Dance on Saturday, November 26, at the Shoreham Hotel.

Show-Me-Staters will dance in the West ballroom between 10 p. m. and 1 a. m. with Miss Catherine Harris, pianist, entertaining during intermission. Preceding the dancing session, at 9:15 p. m., Wilson Gill will show a Technicolor movie on Alaska.

Arkansas Will Sashay

WONDER Staters will celebrate Thanksgiving in traditional mountain style when the Arkansas Society holds a square dance at the Palisades Park clubhouse on Saturday, November 26.

Maestro of the "do si do" will be Dr. Wylie B. Goodsell, a United States Department of Agriculture economist who learned to square dance in his native Idaho. He will not only call the dances but will also direct the music of a four-piece neighborhood band known as Doc Goodsell's Rocky Mountain Rangers.

Further information about the dance and membership in the society can be obtained from Claud M. Hirst, vice president, at Glebe 4400.

No Corn Husking Now

THE Nebraska State Society dance will begin at 10 p. m. in order that its members who journey to the Army-Navy game on Saturday, November 26, will have a chance to attend.

The Thanksgiving Day dance, which will open the winter social season for the society, will be held in the Continental Room of the Wardman Park Hotel. Music will be furnished by Jack Morton's orchestra. Three other dances are planned by the society during the winter season according to Clifford Sandahl, president.

Former residents of the Corn Husker State in Washington who want to join the society may obtain application blanks from the Nebraska Society Headquarters in the office of Senator Butler, Room 125, Senate Office Building.

Illinois Starts Early

TONIGHT the Illinois State Society will hold its Thanksgiving Dance in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing will begin at 9:30 p. m. to the music of Dave McWilliams orchestra.

Evan Howell, judge of the Court of Claims and former Representative from Illinois, and Mrs. Howell will be host and hostess during the evening.

Tea for Displaced Hoosiers

INDIANA will open its fall season with a tea at the Women's City Club, 1733 I st. nw., from 4 to 7 p. m., Sunday, November 27.

The Hoosiers laughingly call the tea "the CCC" which means "coffee, conversation and companionship." There will be no honor guests at the tea since the Indiana State Society decided that at this tea all the "displaced Hoosiers" would be guests of honor.

Experts Advise Better Lunches

School Child's Diet Needs Fortifying

By Lucia Brown

BETTER LUNCHES for your school youngster was the subject of a three-day conference here this week.

Five hundred dietitians, nutritionists, school lunch supervisors and institutional managers met at the Statler for the third School Food Service Association convention, discussed improving nutrition, safety in the kitchen, buying meat, poultry, and fish and a half dozen other subjects.

The five meals a child eats at school each week should be as good as or better than the 16 he eats at home, Dr. Hazel Stiebling, chief of the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, told the school lunch workers.

Short on Calcium Vitamins

"FILLING in the gaps" where the home diet isn't adequate is vital, she said. Usually, the things youngsters are short in are calcium, B vitamins, ascorbic acid, and vitamin A. These can be derived from foods the Government distributes free for school lunches—cheese and nonfat dry milk, orange concentrates, canned tomatoes, fresh fruits, cabbage and potatoes.

That progress is being made in raising nutritional levels is indicated by some recent studies of the Bureau, Dr. Steibling said. Among city families studied, a much larger proportion had a good diet in '48 than in '42.

The A.B.C.'s that will appear on poultry after the first of the year were explained by Mrs. Rowena Carpenter of the Production and Marketing Administration. They'll be the new Government grading marks showing whether dressed poultry is top, second, or third quality. A lot of birds will be tagged on their wings with these marks, though grading will be voluntary on the part of packers.

It May Catch Birds, But . . .

SALT thrown on a slick kitchen floor is simply no good for preventing slipping, William J. Hyland, safety engineer for the Travelers Insurance Co., told the school group. It melts, makes the floor slicker than ever. Thing to do is mop up spilled food at once with hot water, then scatter a powdered granite product if the floor is wood, tile, or slate. It can't be used on linoleum or asphalt tile, but these should never be waxed in a busy kitchen, he said.

Dull knives are more dangerous than sharp ones, Mr. Hyland believes, because in struggling to use them people often cut themselves. As for glass broken in dish-washing, don't dip your hand in at once to take it out of the pan. Pour off the water so you can see the glass well.

Dr. Miriam E. Lowenberg, author of "Food for Young Children in Group Care," told of progress of the Rochester, Minn., community program to raise nutrition among children. It's carried on in prenatal clinics, among mothers of youngsters under six, and in the schools. Dr. Mary deGarmo Bryan, of Columbia University, presided at this week's conference as president of the school food service group.

Pakistan Women Honored at Tea

The wife of the Pakistan Ambassador, Mrs. Mirza Mahmood Ispahani, was hostess yesterday afternoon at an informal cocktail party for the delegation which represented Pakistan at the twenty-sixth annual Women's Exposition in New York City.

The delegates, Begum Hussain Malik, Begum Nazir Ahmad and Mrs. S. J. Pryde, all members of the All-Pakistan Women's Association, are in this country to promote interest in Pakistan-made goods. Many of the seven million religio-political refugees from Indian have been brought together to do handwork, they explained, in an effort to help them reestablish themselves economically.

Brocades and jewelry primarily are what the Pakistan artisans will turn out, but it will be a matter of several years before the commercial possibilities can be organized, Begum Malik explained. "In the United States," she said, "they ask us how many thousands or millions of this item can you send us every month, and the Pakistan workers turn things out one at a time."

The delegates will be here until Monday when they will leave for Hartford, Conn., first stop in a speaking tour.

Guard Finally Gets Badge Of Retirement

William B. Reilly, 55, retired Supreme Court policeman, finally got his retirement badge last night after a six-month delay caused by a strike at the badge factory.

But evidence that Reilly had forgotten all about the postponement was obvious in his broad smile as Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson presented him with the insigne at ceremonies in the Supreme Court cafeteria.

Reilly, who had served on the Supreme Court police force from 1935 to May, 1949, was retired in that month for disability after suffering a stroke.

Reilly, a native of Lowell, Mass., was a railroader before joining the Supreme Court force in 1935 when the new court building was completed.

Last night's affair, attended by a large group of court employes, was sponsored by the Supreme Court Police Club.

Reilly is married and lives with his wife at 6406 Knollbrock dr., Hyattsville, Md.

'Edna' to Go Back to Work —But as 'Ed'

South River, N. J., Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Edna Genecki, who decided after 33 years to change sexes, will return to work soon as Ed Genecki.

Dr. Charles F. Church of New Brunswick, N. J., said Genecki's sexual development was interrupted in the embryo stage, leading his parents to believe he was a girl.

He grew up as a girl, wore dresses and long hair, took Rutgers University extension courses and worked up to a responsible position in New Brunswick.

But two years ago, finding it necessary to shave every day, Genecki was advised to undergo an operation. He is recovering from the surgery now.

Doctors said Genecki has had male tendencies for many years following the initial "error in sex determination." The tendencies became so pronounced the change in sexes was advised.

Friends regarded Edna as a girl, but saw him doing outdoor work heavier than the normal woman can do. He has muscular arms, large hands and physical features of a male, but makeup and clothes previously stamped him a woman.

Removal Set For Ditch Held Polio Source

Work on elimination of the open ditch in the 200 block of East Franklin ave., Silver Spring, near the home of four persons stricken by polio in the past three weeks will begin Monday.

George T. Papageorge, Montgomery County director of public works, said yesterday he has been informed by the State Roads Commission it is ready to begin draining and pipe laying operations then.

State-aid in removal of the ditch, believed by residents to be a possible source of polio, was secured after an inspection by State and county officials November 2.

The ditch first drew public notice when residents complained after a 4-year-old boy contracted polio October 27. Later the child's younger brother and sister, 7-month-old twins, and his mother were stricken.

Catholics Ask International Jerusalem

American leaders of the Catholic Church yesterday appealed for a "real and effective internationalization" of Jerusalem under the United Nations to establish peace and safeguard its holy places for future generations.

The appeal was issued at the annual week-long meeting here of the cardinals, archbishops and bishops of the American hierarchy.

The hierarchy's statement said its members were asking "our civil authorities and . . . the nations" to heed repeated requests from Pope Pius XII for the "territorial internationalization of Jerusalem and its area under the sovereignty and the effective control of the family of nations."

The statement noted that the United Nation's Palestine Conciliation Commission has presented the U. N. General Assembly with detailed proposals for the Jerusalem area, which provides for "maximum local autonomy" while recognizing the area's "special international status."

However, the hierarchy said this proposal would result in a "pretended" internationalization of the section without actually achieving it. The Catholic leaders then pleaded that "the delegates of the nations" set up a "truly international regime and not a mere control or curatorship."

Authorities Oppose Bridge at Gallinger

Three ranking District health officials took a stand yesterday against construction of a bridge across the Anacostia River from Massachusetts ave. because of its effect on Gallinger Hospital.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District health officer, told the highways and bridges committee of the American Automobile Asscoiation that "physicians and surgeons are unanimous in demanding that no main artery of traffic be slashed across the grounds of Gallinger Hospital to establish a Massachusetts ave. bridge approach."

The "general traffic confusion" and noise would be "very detrimental to the care and convalescence of patients," he added.

Colonel W. H. Cary, jr., director of the District Bureau of Public Health Engineering, said a surface highway near Gallinger would cause patients "to grow tense, nervous and excited watching thousands of cars speed past the buildings." Rehabilitation would be "difficult," he added.

Dr. Philip A. E. Stebbing, superintendent of Gallinger, said he favors the proposed East Capitol st. bridge approach because the Gallinger property is to be used for a home for medical men.

At the committee's luncheon meeting at the Mayflower, John Nolen, jr., director of planning for the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, asked the AAA to defer its recommendation on an approach to the bridge for the time being.

Nolen said the East Capitol st. bridge might seriously handicap creation of the Sesquicentennial grounds in the vicinity. No street curbing under the Massachusetts ave. plan would be nearer than 200 feet to any Gallinger building, he said.

Committee Chairman P. Y. K. Howat announced that the commission's views would be heard at another meeting. The committee then will make its recommendation, to be voted on December 6 at the meeting of the D. C. Advisory Board of the AAA.

School Lunch Group Attacks Curbs on Oleo

Restrictions on the sale of margarine place "unfair and discriminatory burden" upon schools and other agencies which furnish low-cost meals, the School Food Service Association said yesterday.

The organization which wound up a two-day meeting at the Statler Hotel called on Congress to end such restrictions, including the Federal margarine tax.

The 400 convention delegates, representing 40 States, declared that margarine is scientifically known as a healthful food which forms a substantial part of the Nation's consumption of fat.

Presidents Elected

The group listed welfare agencies, churches and hospitals, as well as schools, among institutions whose program of food service suffers as a result of the tax.

The association, holding its third annual convention, elected Mrs. Thelma Flanagan, school lunch supervisor for the Florida Department of Education, as president for next year, and Miss Winning S. Pendergast, food service director for Wayne University in Detroit, as president for 1951.

Dr. Willard E. Givens, executive secretary of the National Education Association, told the convention's luncheon meeting that schools have not yet received full recognition of their role in a democracy.

He said four million American children of school age are not in school and tens of thousands of teachers are receiving less real wages than they had 10 years ago.

Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, chairman of the United States Commission for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, described the organization's food service program overseas.

At the morning session Hugh Smith, principal of the District's Thomas Jefferson High School, participated in a symposium on school administration and the school lunch.

Double Assault

Tavern Man Sought on Wife's Charge

Two warrants charging assault with intent to kill were issued in Hyattsville yesterday against John C. Duffy, 42, key witness in a recent Prince Georges County grand jury probe of a reported "slot machine war" in the county.

Duffy, operator of Duffy's Tavern, 4308 Rhode Island ave., Brentwood, was sought by police last night on warrants sworn out by his wife, Iolene, 29, of 835 4th st. ne., and her sister, Mrs. Olga Catalano, 26, of 837 4th st. ne. Both appeared before Mrs. Mary Fainter, justice of peace at the Hyattsville Police Station, and testified to separate attacks by the tavern owner yesterday.

Duffy's testimony before the county grand jury October 21 led to an indictment against Sam Lano, a "coin machine operator" from New York, on a charge of threatening Duffy "with a view to gaining profit from certain coin-operated machines."

The tavern owner's wife charged her husband beat her, threatened her with a knife and then, outside the tavern, attempted to run her down with his automobile after she had closed the establishment for the night around 2 a. m.

Mrs. Catalano said she also was attacked by Duffy after she went to the tavern yesterday morning to open it for business for her sister.

Mrs. Duffy listed her husband's address as the Senate Hotel, 101 D st. ne. County police said they checked the hotel and learned that Duffy had checked out yesterday after staying there several days. On a later report, they began searching the neighborhood of Sibley Hospital.

3 Loot Safe After Binding Watchman

While three intruders pounded open a safe and looted office desks nearby, a 40-year-old watchman stayed bound and blindfolded in a dark warehouse early yesterday, he told police.

He is Frank M. White, 40, of 100 E st. nw., night watchman in the plant of the Hudson Supply & Equipment Co., 7th and T sts. ne.

White said that at 1 a. m., as he entered one of a row of warehouses, three men seized him, one carrying a gun. They tied him with his own shoelaces, and with a piece of rope they apparently brought along, he said, and blindfolded him with a cloth. Officers said this apparently had been torn from a woman's dress.

The trio debated gagging him, White said, but desisted when he promised he would not shout. They left him secured to a roll of linoleum. Then they took his keys.

The office was in an adjoining warehouse. White said he could hear pounding but could not tell what the men were doing. Four hours later, he managed to release himself and call police. Officers found the safe and several desks broken open. A total of $2400 was taken, company officials said, but of this $685 was in cash and the rest in checks. The men also took a .44-caliber revolver from a desk, company officials said. They overlooked an envelope containing $35 in cash.

White described the men as Negroes. The gunman, he said, was about 5 feet 10 inches tall, slim, wearing a light-colored topcoat. The second was about 5 feet 7 inches, wearing a dark slouch hat and dark suit coat, and the third was of small build, less than 5 feet tall, White said.

Father Gets Child's Custody; Grandmother Screams, Faints

District Court proceedings were disrupted yesterday when a woman screamed and fainted on learning that her 11-year-old granddaughter was to be turned over to the father.

The blonde child, Alice Rae Steele, has been fought over by her divorced parents for four years, with the grandmother, Mrs. Mary Thompson, 1744 Q st. nw., often in court to witness the actions.

The father, Charles Ray Steele of Chevrly, Md., came to court yesterday to get the mother, Mrs. Mabel Steele, 2030 Belmont rd. nw., held in contempt. He charges that last month she "intercepted" the child, his by an earlier court custody order, and refused to return her.

The attorneys told Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut that Mrs. Steele was willing now to turn over the child to the father, and the judge agreed to dismiss the contempt charge.

Runs From Courtroom

At this point, Mrs. Thompson jumped up, screamed and ran from the courtroom. Mrs. Steele and Alice followed her shouting and crying. Alice sobbed, "Oh, grandmother, oh, grandmother."

Mrs. Thompson fainted outside the courtroom door and was revived, a court matron taking her to the dispensary.

But Mrs. Steele took the child home with her nevertheless, and in the afternoon, the Steeles were back in court.

The husband's attorney, John Alexander, asked that Mrs. Steele be held in contempt for the refusal to comply. On the witness stand, she explained that she was willing to turn the child over, but would continue to fight for her custody. "All of this is the best thing in the world for the child," he said sarcastically.

Says She Ran Away

Three times, Mrs. Steele said, Alice Rae has run away from her father this autumn. The girl complained, Mrs. Steele testified, that last weekend, the father kept her at a dance until 3 a. m., slapped her face, and then made her wash the dishes for 18 people.

A court affidavit from the girl states that once the father put a sign on her back saying "I am bad" and made her walk to school with it. On other occasions, the paper states, she was sent to bed without supper.

Judge Schweinhaut certified both the contempt aand custody-change actions to be heard at an early date by another judge.

200 Celebrate McLean Lions Charter Night

About 200 membesr and guests of the McLean (Va.) Lions Club celebrated the club's fifth annual charter night Thursday in the McLean firehouse.

Strickland Gillilan, humorist and lecturer, spoke and the Madrigal Singers from Washington and Lee High School sang.

C. A. Hobart of Winchester, Va., the international organization's district governor; E. B. Field of Arlington, and Gene Newkirk of Purcellville, deputy district governors, were present. Also on hand were Everett E. Revercomb of Fairfax, zone chairman, and James C. Hill of Vienna, chairman of the Lions International board of governors.

Alfred B. Rosenblum, president of the McLean club, presided. The program was preceded by a turkey dinner prepared by the women of Langley Methodist Church.

Beauchamp to Speak

Dr. George E. Beachamp, leader of the Washington Ethical Society, will talk to the group on "Thanksgiving—1949" at 11:15 a. m. Sunday at the AVC Club House, 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Oust Nationalists, China Reds Ask U. N.

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Red China today demanded the United Nations unseat the Chinese Nationalist delegation, but made no immediate claim to U. N. membership.

The Communists told the U. N. the Nationalists are in exile and their remaining forces in China will be eliminated soon.

Secretary-General Trygve Lie ruled against circulating the Communist demand to the 59 member nations. He put it into the file of messages from nonmember governments and told reporters:

"They (the Communists) cannot get recognition by the Secretariat or the Secretary-General through the back door."

The U. N. did not publish the text of the message in English from Peiping, but it was reported that in the main paragraph Foreign Minister Chou En-lai said:

"On behalf of the Central Peoples Government of the Peoples Republic of China, I formally demand that the United Nations Organization immediately deprive the 'Delegation of the Chinese Nationalist Government,' in accordance with the principles and spirit of the U. N. Charter, of all rights to further represent the Chinese people in the U. N., so as to conform to the wishes of the Chinese people."

A Chinese Red request for seating in the U. N. is expected to come later when the issue of recognition becomes clearer.

Elizabeth Off to Malta To Prince

London, Nov. 18 (U.P.). — The champagne corks were pulled out of vintage bottles with a discreet and muffled pop against the background of soft lights and sweet music tonight at their majesties' party for their royal highnesses, Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret.

For Elizabeth it was a farewell party. She is flying to Malta early Saturday to join her sailor-husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, at his naval station. For Margaret it was to repay social obligations to her numerous suitors.

It was the first party the King and Queen have given for their daughters in many months.

Elizabeth will visit Malta for several weeks, staying at Villa Guardamgia, the beautiful home of the Earl and Countess Mountbatten of Burma. Prince Philip also will stay at the villa because his destroyer, H. M. S. Chequer, is in drydock.

She plans to return to England in time to spend Christmas at Sandringham with the King and Queen and the baby Prince.

This will be the third time that Elizabeth, heiress presumptive to the throne, has left Britain for a trip abroad. In 1947 she accompanied her parents to South Africa. A year later, in June, 1948, she and Philip spent a few days together in Paris.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent said there was "no foundation" to reports Princess Margaret would visit Canada or the United States next year.

Pact Nations Create Unit For Arms Pool

By The Associated Press

The 12 North Atlantic Pact countries yesterday created a financial and economic committee to assist them in pooling their military forces into a single defense system.

Diplomats representing the 12 nations quickly approved this decision at a "working session" of the North Atlantic Council at the State Department.

Led by Secretary of State Acheson, the council also formally approved an earlier decision to set up a military production and supply board to speed rearmament of the North American continent and western Europe.

A communique issued after the 30-minute meeting said both committees will have their headquarters and working staff in London.

Diplomatic officials said that no final action was taken on a blueprint, already drafted by Western military chiefs, for the joint strategy for defending western Europe against possible Communist aggression. This report, it was learned, will be considered in Paris by the 12-nation defense committee when it meets there next month.

A major duty of the financial and economic committee, the communique said, will be to consider "plans for the mobilization of the economic and financial resources in time of emergency."

The military production and supply board, which was given formal sanction today, already has met in London. Its general duties are to work out specific plans for arms production in the North Atlantic area.

J. D. G. Kelly Dies; Served U. S. 38 Years

James David G. Kelly, 56, a Federal Government employe for 38 years, died yesterday at Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, after a short illness.

A cost analyst with the Air Force at MacDill Field, Tampa, Fla., he moved to Silver Spring in September, to make his home with his daughter, Mrs. Ernest Koontz, 2015 Osborn dr., due to failing health.

He began in the Bureau of Chemistry, Department of Agriculture, in 1911, and later served with the War and Treasury Departments, including duty as an Internal Revenue field agent in Pennsylvania. In 1939 he returned to Washington as an accountant with the Construction Quartermaster, and later was assigned to Tampa.

Born near Fort Myer, Va., he was a World War I veteran, a member of American Legion posts in Uniontown, Pa., and Tampa, Fla., and of the Elks.

His wife, Eva S. Kelly, died last June. Besides Mrs. Koontz, he is survived by two other daughters, Mrs. Ella May Riesterer, Cheverly, Md., and Mrs. Norma Kelly, Orlando, Fla., and a son, Joseph R. Kelly, Philadelphia, Pa.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday in Tampa.

John C. Ward

Funeral services for John Carson Ward, sr., 66, vice president and general manager of the A. Eberly Co., will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at the S. H. Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in the Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Ward, a native of Georgetown, died Thursday at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Elsie Eiland, 1903 Ingraham st., Hyattsville, Md. He had been with the home modernizing firm at 1108 K st. nw since 1904, starting as a mechanic. He was a member of Chillum Castle Masonic Lodge, No. 186, and served as its master in 1925.

Surviving besides Mrs. Eiland are two sons, John C. Ward, jr., of Hyattsville, and Thomas Ward, Orlando, Fla., and three grandchildren.

County to Give Free Rabies Shots

Household pets will be given free rabies inoculations today at seven Montgomery County locations from 10 a. m. to noon.

Pet owners are cautioned by county health authorities that inoculation of an animal does not remove it from quarantine restrictions invoked Tuesday for the major part of the Takoma Park-Silver Spring area following the reported biting of nine children by a rabid dog last week.

The stations will be at Four Corners Fire House; Silver Spring Armory; E. E. Price's store, Wheaton Crossroads; Takoma Park Health Center; Cissel's store, Colesville Crossroads; Hillandale Fire Department, and Silver Spring Health Center, Old Bladensburg rd.

Meanwhile, District health officials warned residents to watch for rabid dogs straying into the District.

To Aid Refugees

Clapp Asks 'WPA' Plan For Arabs

Lake Success, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—The United Nations Economic Survey Mission for the Middle East today recommended that a $48,200,000 WPA-type relief program be set up to care for Arab refugees from the Palestine war.

The report of the four-man mission, under the chairmanship of Gordon R. Clapp, chief of the Tennessee Valley Administration, recommended that an additional $5,500,000 be appropriated by the world organization to continue direct relief to 652,000 refugees until April. The recipients then would be transferred to work-relief rolls.

The mission, operating in the Near East since September, recommended that the number of refugees receiving relief be cut from the present total of 940,000.

The group, in recommending the $53,700,000 program for the next 18 months, estimated there were some 751,000 refugees whose status is directly connected with the Holy Land war.

But it calculated that 20,000 are employed and capable of caring for an additional 60,000, while 15,000 have independent means and 4000 are supported by Iraq, thus dropping the total eligible to 652,000.

"Useful, gainful employment can be found for all the refugees able and willing to work," the report noted.

"There are many potential opportunities for useful and productive work to improve and reclaim the land, increase the supply and use of water, strengthen and extend road systems and improve sanitation and shelter.

"Suitable employment for the refugees can be found in many places, especially in Jordan and Arab Palestine, where nearly half the refugees are located."

55 Czechs Get Sentences For 'Spying'

Prague, Nov. 18 (AP).—Czechoslovakia sent 55 persons to prison today on charges of spying and indicated more arrests, trials and sentences would follow.

All 55, seven of them women, were sentenced to from a year to life—they were accused of trying to overthrow the Communist regime and spying for an unnamed power, presumably the United States.

The signal of more trials to come was in a police broadcast, in which an unidentified commentator advised the police:

"The aim of the rotten Western reactionary regimes is to retain their positions in the world and to install that kind of regime in the Socialist countries. The only way they can achieve this is to wage war, which is their last refuge.

Accused as a leader was Oldrich Novotny, 27, former Security Police officer fired when the Communists seized power in February, 1948. The court announced a death sentence, but then cut the penalty to life imprisonment, 10,000 crowns ($200) fine and confiscation of his property.

Novotny, the prosecution said, fled to Western Germany a year ago and was hired by "a foreign power" to spy and build an underground organization in Czechoslovakia.

The state said he returned here, recruited the others and was captured in June after conducting an underground railway to spirit persons out of Czechoslovakia. The prosecution said he confessed and implicated the others.

In the group was Dr. Josef Sejnoha, former chief of the Security Police criminal department, fired at the same time as Novotny. He drew a four-year sentence.

Nepal Journey Produces Rare Bird Specimen

Send an ornithologist on an expedition to the "unexplored and untrammeled" kingdom of Nepal in the Himalayas. Let him look for a species of bird that's been missing for 80 years. Mix with a dash of explorer's luck, and what do you have?

The result, Dr. S. Dillon Ripley told the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall last night, was even better than the original quest—a specimen of the "spiny babbler," a bird lost to science for 106 years.

Ripley's report on the National Geographic-Yale University-Smithsonian Institute expedition he led last year opened the National Geographic's sixty-second annual winter lecture series.

Ripley, associate curator of Yale's Peabody Museum, said the expedition produced zoological specimens almost as "tremendously valuable" as the long-lost bird.

The ornithologist explained that his party was the first to explore Nepal, a "Shangri-La" nation sandwiched between Tibet and India and forbidden to Westerners.

What the six-man expedition discovered was shown last night through color movies taken by Volkmar Wentzel, National Geographic photographer.

But it didn't record the discovery of the original long-missing bird, the "mountain quail." As far as Ripley is concerned, it's still "lost."

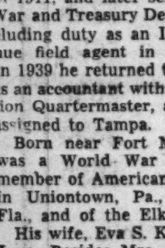
Hall Elected to Fourth Term As Civic Federation Head

Woolsey W. Hall was elected last night to his fourth term as president of the Federation of Civic Associations.



Hall

The 67-year-old retired Treasury Department purchasing agent defeated Huver I. Brown, attorney and one of the founders of the Pleasant Plains Civic Association, by a vote of 67 to 27.

All the other officers of the federation were re-elected by acclamation at the meeting in the Board Room of the District Building.

Mrs. E. Wyatt Payton, the corresponding secretary who is also principal of Francis Junior High School, resigned immediately after her reelected, and was replaced by Mrs. Edith Berkley Portal, president of the Central Northeast Civic Association. Mrs. Portal's election was also by acclamation.

Officers Reelected

The reelected officers are Mrs. Rosina C. Tucker, Public Interest, first vice president; John B. Duncan, Benning Heights, second vice president; Mrs. Edith P. Thomas, Eastland Garden, recording secretary; Mrs. William N. Buckner, Pleasant Plains, assistant recording secretary; Lawrence L. Larry, assistant corresponding secretary; Bernard C. Chapman, Northeast Boundary, treasurer; Mrs. Martha K. Simpson, Kingman Park, financial secretary, and the Rev. John E. Morris, Carver, chaplain.

Hall, who is married and lives at 1330 Wallach pl. nw., was formerly president of the federation in 1935, 1946 and 1947. He is currently serving as vice president of the Washington Federation of Churches and of the Central Suffrage Conference.

He is also an elder of the 15th st. Presbyterian Church. He retired from the Treasury Department last June after 46 years' service.

Nominated By Harper

Hall's name was placed in nomination by his predecessor, Ernest F. Harper, who declined to run for reelection.

In other business, the federation voted to request all 28 member bodies to back the federation's adovcacy of the transfer of Central High School to colored students with individual letters to the Board of Education.

The motion further requested the presidents of the member bodies to direct delegates of each civic association to attend Board of Education hearings on the issue. The federation has been strongly in favor of using Central High School to relieve overcrowding at Cardoza High School.

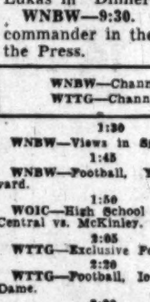
Dr. Robinson Funeral Rites Set for Today

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. today for Dr. Charles Jabel Robinson, 59, Washington area veterinarian for more than 30 years and son of the District's first veterinarian. He died at Providence Hospital Thursday after four months' illness. Services will be in the Church of the Nativity, 6008 Georgia ave. nw.



Dr. Robinson

Dr. Robinson was graduated with Catholic University's first class in architecture in 1914, but, decided upon a new career, entered the U. S. College of Veterinary Surgeons, graduating in 1917. He later became dean of the school.

When the school closed in 1927, Dr. Robinson embarked on an extensive practice in the District and in Maryland and Virginia.

He was a member of the Church of the Nativity and its Holy Name Society; B. P. O. Elks Lodge No. 15, Knights of Columbus and the Veterinary Medical Association of the District.

Dr. Robinson was the grandson of Jabel Robinson, a member of the Canadian Parliament in 1911. Dr. Robinson's father, Dr. C. Barnwell Robinson, came here in 1888 as the city's first veterinarian, was in charge of the District Government's 800 horses, founded the College of Veterinary Surgeons and helped found the Veterinary Medical Association. Dr. C. J. Robinson's mother, Mrs. Dora Flading Robinson, of Wheeling, W. Va., died in 1943.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Robinson, 5620 Colorado ave. nw.; a sister, Mrs. Carrie R. Smith, 222 C st. nw.; a brother, Joseph F. Robinson, a civil engineer with the Architect of the Capitol, of 618 Aspen st. nw., and two nephews, Dr. E. Barnwell Smith, also a veterinarian, 319 Emerson st. nw., and John Page Smith, an advertising executive of New York City.

Mrs. Teresa Malkiel

Mrs. Theresa Serber Malkiel, 76, a pioneer feminist and an expert in adult education, died Thursday night in a New York City hospital, friends here learned yesterday.

Mrs. Malkiel is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Nelson Poynter, co-editor and publisher of the Congressional Quarterly here and wife of the publisher of the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times, and three sisters, Mrs. Alice Petluck, Mrs. Rebecca Fox and Mrs. Elizabeth Fried.

The widow of a New York attorney, Mrs. Malkiel began her career as a writer, identifying herself immediately with the feminist movement. Her book, "The Diary of a Shirtwaist Maker," has been credited with bringing about reforms in New York State's labor laws.

She founded the Brooklyn Adult Students Association and directed it until a few weeks ago.

Carl J. Lockwood

Carl J. Lockwood, 67, a former director of the National Capital Bank here, died Thursday in San Francisco, Calif., it was learned here yesterday. A graduate of Eastern High School and George Washington University Law School, Mr. Lockwood moved to the West Coast 40 years ago.

Carry on Men, But Don't Overdo It

Complaints about the uncouth language used by service personnel on public transportation have led to prompt action.

Capt. Robert J. Hennessy, public relations officer at Andrews Air Base, informs me that MP's have been ordered to patrol buses to the base—especially those on the late runs.

But he adds that the services realize that such patrols provide only part of the answer to the basic problem, and that commanding officers are much concerned with doing a sound job of indoctrination.

Regularly scheduled I & E (Information and Education) lectures, and discussions within smaller groups, keep hammering away at teaching the serviceman's responsibilities, and the proper course of conduct for his relationships with the communities in which he finds himself.

But, like all educational programs since the dawn of time, progress is slow. Servicemen are usually young, tough, and full of vim and vinegar. Sometimes they get a bit out of hand.

But there's nothing wrong with them that a little guidance and policing won't cure.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Bob Morrow of 1755 P st. nw. observes that with railroad prices going up one more notch, "Mule Train" may be here to stay.

OVERHEARD

Mrs. P. Yahr of Beltsville, Md., reports this snatch of conversation from a drug store fountain:

"Y'know, I never used to care much for coffee; but since it went up to 79 cents a pound it sure tastes wonderful."

IT AIN'T SO

David Kandel of 1311 H st. nw. would have you believe that I stand over my contributors with a whip, and force them to turn out bright gems in sufficient quantity to fill this space each day. Mourns Dave:

Should you discover gold, old boy,
Your hard-luck days are through;
But you'll be plodding all your life
If Gold discovers you.

GIVE-AWAYS

READ THE SMALL PRINT, BUB

WMAL Announcer Charlie Edwards and Loew Theater Manager Joe Margolis have long enjoyed a good-natured feud.

When Margolis signed Charlie to an 8-day contract to do the narration for this week's "Thanksgiving Symphony," by Maestro Sam Jack Kaufman, Charlie saw a chance to do a little needling.

"When Gene Ford was living," he snapped, "I didn't bother to read my contracts. But with you drawing them up, a guy can't be too careful."

And with that he made a great show of studying the contract, while Margolis fretted and fumed at the delay.

At long last, out came the fountain pen, and the agreement was signed. Then Margolis beamed, and said: "Now read the last line, smarty." It said:

"Artists also agrees to cater to management's whims, and to answer all questions with: 'Yes sir.'"

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—When Marshal Montgomery arrives here next week, he'll hold reunion with Lieut. Gen. Gillen, commanding general of the Third Army, at Fort Benning. They had met during the war, when Montgomery's Twenty-first Army Group fought next to Gillen's. One day Gillen learned that Montgomery had moved into the American sector, without notice, and had moved into the chateau Gillen intended to take for himself. And it would take two weeks for a complaint to reach Eisenhower through channels . . . A platoon of American soldiers therefore stormed the chateau, confronted Montgomery and accused him of being a German spy. "You couldn't be Montgomery," an American lieutenant explained. "Montgomery is a gentleman. He'd have notified our general if he intended to come into our sector to take a house" . . . Montgomery accompanied them back to the British sector, where he was identified—and where he stayed.

Secretary of Defense Johnson told some business leaders he had invited on a unification tour that he is attempting to get a "cross-use of chaplains in all the services." He hoped, said Johnson, that in the armed services there would be "a unified approach to God."

Cecil B. de Mille's name, of course, will head all the rest, in the billing of "Samson and Delilah." When he produced "King of Kings," the billing read: "Cecil B. de Mille's 'King of Kings,' With a Talented Cast of 10,000."

A speed record for the publishing business was established by Ely Culbertson's book on canasta. He finished writing the 100-page manuscript November 8, and it was on sale in the bookstores on November 17.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Ex-Marine Cleans Up Los Angeles

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note: The Brass Ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, today goes to Maj. Gen. William A. Worton, the former Marine who is now cleaning up Los Angeles.)

Los Angeles.—When Negro singer Paul Robeson came out to Los Angeles shortly after the Peekskill riots, it was generally expected that all hell would break loose.

Pearson

Robeson was reported to have picked this polygot, mushroomed metropolis of the West Coast because of its crackpot Communist fringe and the hope that another riot would add more fuel to the distorted flames of the Moscow radio.

But just the opposite happened. Robeson came and left Los Angeles without a ripple. No baseball bats were wielded. No rocks thrown, no ovation awaited him. And, most important of all, no propaganda fed the Moscow radio.

The man responsible for this efficiency is a stocky, quiet-spoken officer who trained the Third Marines for the landing at Okinawa and who is now tackling the toughest job of his life. It is no exaggeration to say that Maj. Gen. William Arthur Worton would rather lead troops into battle than face the political morasses and pitfalls that await the chief of police of Los Angeles.

His job is probably typical of that faced by the modern, overgrown, big American city which is now trying to prevent the new wave of sex crimes, robberies and degeneracy that has engulfed every big city in the wake of war.

Los Angeles 'Scooped'

When General Worton took office late last summer, just about everything under the sun happened at once. Mickey Cohen, much-publicized sultan of the underworld, had just been shot at. Worton's predecessor as chief of police had just been indicted—though later acquitted. And a raft of dictaphone recordings taken from a microphone hidden in Mickey Cohen's house made headlines in the Los Angeles papers.

Indicative of the easygoing lethargy of the Los Angeles police force was, first, the fact that these dictaphone recordings had been lying in a police lieutenant's garage for months. And, second, the fact that the recordings were sold to various underworld leaders before they were shown to the new chief of police.

In fact, Los Angeles generally was so uninterested in its own police graft that Dick Hyer of the San Francisco Chronicle stole the story right from under the noses of the Los Angeles newspapers. And for some days, Los Angeles papers were frantically rewriting the San Francisco Chronicle stories in order to report what was going on in their own town.

Blocked by Civil Service

What General Worton found in the Los Angeles police force may also be typical of what is happening in other American cities. When he tried to fire the head of his detective force, he found that he couldn't. The detective chief was protected by Civil Service. And if charges were preferred against him, those charges were heard by a board of fellow police officers whose watchword was self-protection.

In brief, Los Angeles had gone to such extremes with Civil Service that a "police union," as tightly controlled as if it had been organized by John L. Lewis, had developed.

Police Task Complicated

Chief Worton's job has been difficult not only because Los Angeles filled up during the war with a motly migration of Midwest warworkers, pension-hunting lodsters and migrant Mexicans, but also because large sections of the city are not under his control.

What Worton found was that Hollywood, Beverly Hills, Pasadena, and half a dozen of the other cities that nudge Los Angeles and really make up its metropolitan area, operate their own police forces. On top of this, Los Angeles County has 3000 police of its own, and it is in the county rather than the city that southern California gambling really flourishes.

King-pin of Los Angeles County is colorful Sheriff Eugene Biscailuz, who seems to get no more excited about an occasional gang shooting than about the gambling that attracts crowds along Sunset Strip. After the hoodlums spattered the front of Sherry's with shotgun slugs in an effort to bump off Mickey Cohen, Sheriff Biscailuz decided to reenact the crime—with all witnesses present. So, accompanied by newsmen and photographers, the sheriff arrived with his retinue. But no witnesses.

After a lot of waiting, hemming and hawing, the sheriff remarked: "Well, they must have been tired, or maybe they went to the fights tonight."

Whereupon he had his picture taken, pointing at the bullet holes, and went home.

Police Improvements Noted

The Los Angeles press seems to love Sheriff Biscailuz and seldom points to the fact that it's in his bailiwick that things are wide open, free and easy. Of course, there may be a reason for this love. Not long ago the sheriff threw a party at the Eastside Brewery, with a young army of newsmen present. There was also plenty of bourbon and filet mignon. Just how the sheriff could afford such a party remains a mystery, but his objective was no mystery.

"We've all been in this thing together for a long time," he said, in a little speech of welcome. "So remember your old friend Gene Biscailuz if things start popping. And remember we've always been friends."

A few days later 200 deputy sheriff badges, as big as Pepsi-Cola badges, were handed out to the press.

No wonder, when General Worton took over the Los Angeles police and started cleaning up, he was razzed by certain newspapers. He hadn't learned the trick of passing out filet mignon, bourbon and deputy sheriff badges.

The former Marine Corps general leads a lonely life, but it's beginning to pay dividends. Every night after supper he makes a surprise inspection of a police station. Every day he is getting better morale, more loyalty, and more work from his men. Many of the Los Angeles police force are now former veterans and, though green, take their work seriously.

Worton's greatest problem is the fact that under civil service rules he can hold office for a fixed term. This rule was adopted to keep politics out of the police force. But now the politicians and the mobsters are falling back on it to keep off their necks for more than a temporary period the greatest cleanup servant Los Angeles has ever seen.

Another Negro Judge Asked for City Court

The Washington Bar Association last night called for another Negro judge on the Municipal Court bench.

The association commented that in the last 20 years, the District judiciary has increased from 19 to 41 members without an increase in Negro representation.

The group also appointed a committee to determine the Commissioners' position on enforcement of the Civil Rights Acts of 1872 and 1873.
